Hoax Nets $550,000

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter)—Police scoured Sydney and its environs for a man who hoaxed Qantas Airlines into giving him $550,000 today after he said a bomb was secreted aboard one of its airliners, in flight with 128 persons aboard.

After he received the money, the man telephoned to say there really was no bomb aboard the Boeing 707, carrying 116 passengers and 12 crew, which was circling over Botany Bay to burn up fuel.

A Qantas spokesman said the man's claim that a bomb was aboard had to be taken seriously.

"There were 128 people's lives at stake—we had to pay the money," he said.

A Qantas spokesman said the drama began at 11 a.m. today when the department of civil aviation received a telephone call saying a bomb was in a locker at the international terminal at Sydney Airport.

The locker was opened and a bomb was found.

It was of gelignite, with a barometrically-controlled trigger system designed to explode at a pre-set altitude.

With the device were three notes—one addressed to Capt. R. J. Ritchie, the general manager of Qantas, and another to a member of the police.

The third gave technical explanations of how the bomb worked and how it could be defused.

The Qantas spokesman said the note to Ritchie claimed a similar device was on board Qantas Flight 755, and demanded $550,000 for information on how it could be found and defused.

The aircraft was then on its way to Hong Kong.

The airliner was recalled to Sydney and circled over Botany Bay, burning up fuel in preparation for a possible emergency landing.

Shortly afterward Ritchie received another telephone call from "Mr. Brown," who said there was no bomb on the aircraft.

A Party For The Fearful

By ANTHONY WESTELL
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — The Action Canada movement launched Tuesday by Paul Hellyer purports to be a democratic movement through which the average Canadian can participate in setting national goals.

But it looks more like an organization designed to mount Hellyer on a white horse and send him back to power in Ottawa at the head of an army of the discouraged and the frightened.

'Those Little People'

The full-page recruiting advertisement which Action Canada is to run across the country next Saturday is addressed to "those little people whose future is being manipulated or sacrificed for the benefit of entrenched bureaucratic 'overseers'."

It warns against big government and "unchecked power over your life by giant corporate interests and super union czars." It declares that Parliament has become "a whimpering rubber stamp."

The ad goes on, "Let's do something about it" and promises that Action Canada will bring the little people back into the mainstream.

That was Hellyer's theme at his press conference Tuesday. He wants to listen to the people, to speak for their interests, and he's so flexible and informal that he has not even decided how the new movement will be structured.

But in fact, he has already made his own soundings to discover what issues are bugging Canadians deep-down.

Fundamental Malaise

He disclosed that several months ago he commissioned a private survey which discovered a "fundamental malaise" among Canadians. It is broad and hard to define, said Hellyer, but the poll showed Canadians turning inwards, fed up with high taxes, unemployment, red tape, inability to communicate, the failure to achieve national standards of excellence.

Action Canada's answers to the malaise are, oddly enough, the ideas Hellyer has been advocating for years, as a Liberal MP and cabinet minister and amateur student of economics. He and his movement are for tax cuts, wage and price controls, better housing, urban transportation systems, more Canadian savings to promote greater Canadian ownership of Canadian resources.

These are not so much programs as slogans directed to troubled people looking for simple answers to complicated problems.

Magician's Promise

The magician's promise is carried even further in the coupon in the advertisement which invites new members of Action Canada: "Select the problems you feel should be solved in Canada right now. Rate up to give in order of importance:

- Tax reform.
- Pollution.
- Federal-provincial relations.
- Unemployment.
- Welfare reforms.
- Inflation and the economy.
- Natoinal economic independence.
- Constitutional revision.
- Multi-cultural problems.
- Crime.
- Canada's foreign relations."

Just tick the problems you want settled right away and indicate those that can wait until next week, and mail in your membership to Paul Hellyer, founding chairman, and the founding committee.

Just who is on the committee, heading the new mass movement? Hellyer says that "we" he is coy about indentifying the other members of the in-group selected the committee to be presentative of average Canadians. They turn out, when they speak at the press conference or are interviewed later, to be a mixture of people with a variety of motives, ranging from the slightly kooky to simple devotion to Hellyer, their friend and leader.

Soldier 'Shields' 3 From Bomb Blast

BELFAST (CP) — A British army sergeant who took the full force of a suitcase bomb after herding a father and two young children to safety died today.

The bomb wounded 27 other persons, destroyed a large part of an army-police barracks in Belfast and blew five cars across the street.

Police said the suitcase was apparently thrown by a teenager.

The sergeant was the eighth British soldier killed in Northern Ireland by terrorists and the second in five days.

The death toll since Northern Ireland erupted into violence in August, 1969, now stands at 55.

POLICE MAY SHOOT

Under the pressure of escalating violence in the strife-torn North, Premier Brian Faulkner a few hours earlier announced that the army had been authorized to shoot anyone carrying weapons or acting suspiciously without waiting for orders.

Opposition politicians threatened today to walk out of the Northern Ireland Parliament to protest the warning.

Two MPs said today they might quit Parliament over the statement.

But the British Army said it will only shoot to kill when there is good reason and intention rather than risk endangering innocent persons with warning shots. Troops in riot situations have fired only after loudspeaker warnings.

The suitcase bomb contained at least 30 pounds of gelignite. A terrorist hurled it through a doorway of the barracks in Springfield Road, on the edge of a district that is a stronghold of the Irish Republican Army.

THATCHER CALLS VOTE ON LABOR COURT ISSUE

Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan has announced a provincial general election for Wednesday, June 23, in which his Liberal party will be seeking a third term of office. See Page 3.

Thatcher said Tuesday the major issue will be a better method of resolving labor-management disputes and promised if his party is returned he will implement a labor-management court.

Contractor Charged In Machete Murders

YUBA CITY, Calif. (AP) — The bodies of 12 transient fruit workers, hacked with a machete or some kind of heavy knife, have been unearthed from the peach and plum orchards of this farming community, the county sheriff announced today.

Sheriff Roy Whiteacre said Juan V. Corona, 37, a farm labor contractor, was arrested shortly before dawn at a Richland Road home.

"He will be booked for 12 counts of murder," the sheriff said of Corona. Whiteaker did not announce an alleged motive for the slayings.

Undersheriff Frank Cartoscelli said all the victims were transient fruit workers, ranging in age from 40 to 60 and that the times of the killings ranged from five or six weeks ago to sometime this week.

Corona was led into the county jail with his head covered by sweater and coat, his hands manacled behind his back. He was under heavy guard.

The bodies were found—eight Tuesday, one last Friday and three today—in two local fruit orchards. All were in shallow graves.

Cartoscelli said the murder weapon was a machete or heavy knife.

FESTIVITIES CALENDAR

NEWS BRIEFS

Passengers Stricken

SASKATOON (CP)—Twelve persons were in hospital today after being taken from a Canadian National Railways trans-continental passenger train suffering from what hospital authorities called food poisoning. A hospital spokesman said all 12 are in good condition and most probably would be released from hospital today.

Triple Crash in S.A.

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Three South African Air Force planes crashed into a mountain today, killing all the crew members and other officers on board. The number of victims was not immediately reported.

Steel Price Up

TORONTO (CP) — Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. has advised customers of price increases of up to an average of 4.8 per cent. The 4.8-per-cent increase is for hot-rolled and cold-rolled sheet and strip steel and is effective July 1. A major portion of these products is used in the manufacture of consumer items.

WARM WELCOME FOR TRUDEAUS

Times News Services

MURMANSK—Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and his wife Margaret were welcomed here Tuesday night by enthusiastic crowds.

The Canadian visitors leave tonight for Leningrad for the final stop of their Russian tour before returning to Ottawa Friday.

Earlier, Trudeau made a plea for international co-operation in preserving the human heritage and environment of the global "city of man," stressing the need for Soviet-Canadian co-operation.

Trudeau also was shown through the world's most powerful icebreaker, the Lenin. See story on Page 3.

Kansas—Not Amchitka Urge B.C. Groups

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two British Columbia environmental groups urged the Atomic Energy Commission Tuesday to shift the proposed underground nuclear test set for Amchitka Island in the Aleutians for this fall to the geographic centre of the United States rather than threaten Canada, Russia and Japan.

In briefs to be presented today in Juneau, Alaska, the B.C. Environmental Council said the planned five-megaton blast "presents an undoubted threat to the Pacific fisheries, in particular those of Canada, Japan and the Soviet."

The Sierra Club of B.C. calls the test "ecological vandalism" and says giving the AEC the authority to conduct hearings on its own is "somewhat analagous to the fox being given the job to watch over the chickens."

The council, whose brief is to be presented by Patricia A. Moore, a graduate student at the University of B.C. Resource Science Centre, points out that Amchitka is only about 800 miles from the Russian mainland, 1,500 miles from Japan and about the same distance from Canada.

It said because the U.S. has the power to explode or not explode the nuclear device, it should be willing to accept any risk associated with it and should explode it in central Kansas, its own geographic centre.

QUEBEC WANTS 1980 GAMES

QUEBEC (CP) — Finance Minister Raymond Garneau said Tuesday the Quebec government has decided to propose Quebec City as the site of the 1980 Winter Olympics.

He told the Quebec regional Chambre de Commerce a technical dossier is being prepared.

In asking for the support of neighboring municipalities, Garneau said the region has many advantages including skiing facilities at nearby Mont Ste. Agne and the annual Quebec Winter Carnival.

SURREY TELLS WELFARE RECIPIENTS:

Pick Berries—Not Cheques

SURREY (CP)—More than 300 able-bodied welfare recipients in Surrey will be advised to pick berries rather than pick up welfare cheques after June 1.

Municipal council Tuesday night authorized the district welfare department to send out letters to employable welfare recipients suggesting that the social assistance cheques they receive next week should be their last for the time being because work is available picking berries.

Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said in an interview that if employable persons refuse to accept available work they are not entitled to welfare.

"If work is available, even though it is not the type of work they like, they should be made to accept it or be refused welfare," he said.

Council was told there are 349 persons on welfare who are capable of work such as berry picking.

In Edmonton Tuesday night city council considered and later rejected a proposal to make transient youth pay their way by cleaning parks, ravines and public areas.

Mayor Ivor Dent opposed the motion, telling council that such a system would create an administrative nightmare in dealings with unions alone.

World Intervention In Pakistan Urged

BULLETIN

—The Press Trust of India News Agency reported tonight that at least 120 Pakistani troops had been killed by Indian border security forces in encounters in the last 48 hours.

The agency said the Pakistanis had intruded from East Pakistan into the Indian state of Assam and the territory of Meghalaya.

NEW DELHI (AP) Prime Minister Gandhi appealed today for international intervention in East Pakistan to avoid a threat to peace in Southeast Asia.

"The international community must appreciate the very critical character of the situation that has now developed," she told Parliament.

"Any failure to do so may well lead to disastrous consequences."

The prime minister in her second major appeal to the world community in three days, said the civil strife in East Pakistan had touched off "calculated genocide resulting in the murder of tens of thousands of men, women and children" and a vast refugee influx into India.

"It is a problem that threatens the peace and security of India and indeed of Southeast Asia," she said.

"The world must intervene to see that peace and security is re-established and maintained."

Mrs. Gandhi did not spell out what type of international intervention she wanted, but she made clear that India opposed any resumption of economic aid to Pakistan that will be used against the people of Bangla Desh (Bengali nation.)

Inquest Opens Into 32 Deaths

VANCOUVER (CP) — The RCMP have subpoenaed witnesses who may testify today at the opening of the inquest into the deaths of 32 crew members aboard the Norwegian cruise ship Meteor.

Staff-Sgt. George Williams said Tuesday night he hoped one phase of the investigation into the fire that ripped through the crew's quarters on the ship Saturday will be completed in time to allow some witnesses to give evidence when Vancouver coroner Glen McDonald opens the inquest.

He did not say who had been subpoenaed or what evidence would be given. The RCMP investigation is continuing and Sgt. Williams said arson had not been ruled out.

The disaster aboard the 300-foot vessel was the worst in British Columbia waters since 1906 when the Valencia was blown on to the southwest coast of Vancouver Island and 117 persons were killed.

3 KILLED LAST YEAR

Last Aug. 2, three passengers were killed when the Soviet freighter Sergey Yesenin sliced into the B.C. Ferry Queen of Victoria in Active Pass, some 30 miles southwest of Vancouver.

Sgt. Williams said no one has been detained in connection with the investigation but "we have the assurance of the Norwegian consul that none of the crew will leave Canada until they are no longer required by the RCMP."

Meanwhile, a federal department of transport team conducting a preliminary inquiry into the incident is expected to make its report to Transport Minister Don Jamieson by the end of the week. Mr. Jamieson will then decide whether or not to call a formal investigation.

Norwegian justice department investigators, scheduled to arrive Tuesday, were delayed and were expected here this afternoon.

Staff Sgt. Williams said:

"As far as the RCMP are concerned this is our investigation. We are not assisting them (the Norwegian authorities). If anything, they will be assisting us."

SCENE UNDISTURBED

He said the site of the fire has not been disturbed so that the Norwegian investigators will have the opportunity to make their own assessment.

"We're not overlooking anything in this investigation, including the possibility that the fire was deliberately set," he said.

The different spots where the fire appeared to have started were fairly close to each other, but spread over several decks, he said.

Referring to reports that the RCMP had found evidence of drinking in the crew's quarters prior to the fire, he said "there is no suggestion it (the drinking) had anything to do with the fire."

Earlier, Captain Alf Morner of the Meteor, gave a moving tribute at memorial services for the 32 dead crew members.

DOG BITES HAND

NORWICH, England (CP) — Things were going fine for Betty Lange taking her driving test for the third time until she tried hand signalling.

As she signalled right, a dog jumped up and bit her fingers.

CAPITAL SCENE

The Victoria and District Parent Teacher Council will hold its final meeting of the term Thursday at 8 p.m. in Central Junior Secondary.

The younger section of the junior branch of the Victoria Natural History Society will meet Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at the Mayfair Bowling Lanes for a field trip along the upper ponds at Francis Park.

The Victoria Natural History society has planned an entomology field trip for Saturday. All those interested are to meet at 10 a.m. at the new biology building at Uvic, with their lunches. Dr. R. A. Ring of the university biology department will lead the trip.

ART GALLERY SHOW

First Prize Shared

The top prize in the annual jury show at the Victoria Art Gallery has been divided by two local artists.

He had just returned from Alberta where he received, from the University of Calgary, a doctorate for his contributions to Canadian art.

MANY CONFUSED

"Many artists today are confused," he said later in an interview. "They are still haunted by the 19th century philosophy of progress. They think they have to produce something new — something revolutionary."

A record number of entries were received by the gallery for the show — a total of 384 compared to 323 last year.

Judges were Donald Jarvis, well-known Canadian painter and instructor at the Vancouver School of Art, and Kenneth Pawula, associate professor of the art department of the University of Washington.

NEW FEATURE

It consists of 40,000 squares of pink paper on which have been printed "Surrender — Art's Army." They are accompanied by a program requiring that the sheets be distributed evenly over the floor of the main gllery. The artist proposes to photograph the floor in its undisturbed state and then once again after Art's Army — the gallery visitors — have created a new pattern by trampling over it.

The entry was conditionally accepted by one judge, who suggested that the experiment be confined to the last week of the show rather than its entire duration.

IDEA ESSENTIAL

Conceptual Art, in which the idea rather than the finished product is considered the essential esthetic element, has been a feature of many European and North American exhibitions during the past two years or more.

Ten prizes of $10 were awarded to the outstanding entrants in the Greater Victoria Secondary Schools exhibition currently showing at the provincial museum.

Winners are R. Miller, University School; Heather Cragg and Gordon Kidd, Oak Bay Senior; Sidney Chow, Mount Douglas; Cheryl Fink and Chris Jiggins, Esquimalt High; Jane Lavoie, Reynolds High; Randy Dixon, Colquitz Junior Secondary; Margaret van der Broek and Darrell Kolodziejak, Central Junior Secondary, Dave Warnock, Shoreline Secondary and Sidney Jayn Corbett of St. Margaret's.

The awards were organized by the gallery's board of directors through Mrs. B. C. Hale and Mrs. Carole Sabiston, president of the Greater Victoria Art Teachers' Association.

. . . HELLYER

out of a rut. Because there is no difference between the regular parites.

Yuri Shymko, a Toronto teacher, sees Action Canada as a useful vehicle for ethnic groups who feel dominated by the English and French, are seeking more government support for their cultures and are anxious for Canada to pursue a more anti-Communist policy abroad.

Rose Vaszary, a dignified lady with grey hair piled on top of her head, explains that she used to be housekeeper to the Hellyer family and is happy to join his movement because she is interested in social affairs.

Only Public Face

Reid Scott, the Toronto Alderman and former MP, is the only public face on the committee, with Hellyer, and in some ways the most puzzling one. He sees nothing inconsistent in joining Action Canada which is committed to defending free enterprise while continuing to be a member of the NDP.

He says that he has never been a tub-thumping socialist and now fears that his own party is unable to take a tough line on wage and price controls because it is ruled by the big unions.

"When Paul spoke to me about Action Canada and the goal of wage and price controls, it suited my mood," he says.

Scott senses deep public disenchantment with the present parties and adds, with a gleam in his eye, that there is a good chance Action Canada will blossom quickly into a major political force. There has been talk that he want to run as mayor of Toronto, and a new movement might just be the vehicle.

100 Per Cent Backing

Joe Carenza sells insurance in Toronto's Italian community and has been a Liberal worker for Hellyer. But the economic squeeze is making it tough for small businessmen like him and he has been considering going back to southern Italy where the Fiat factories are bringing a new prosperity.

"When Hellyer spoke to me three weeks ago, I went with him 100 per cent," he says. "Something has to be done, and this is worth trying."

Jean Meltzer, a handsome woman in a smart blue suit and a white silk blouse, is from Edmonton where her husband is a doctor and once ran as a Liberal candidate. Mrs. Meltzer is against what she calls the closed doors of the Liberal establishment, and is a long-time admirer of Hellyer; ready to support a leader who can indoctrinate Canadians with the message that they must work for the good of the country, and not merely for what they can take out.

She came here from Britain 24 years ago and worries that native Canadians don't know the value of their own country.

One of 'We' Group

W. E. "Bill" Bussiere, a young trust company official from Montreal, was handing out literature at the press conference Tuesday and was referred to by Hellyer as one of the "We" group who started the whole thing. He says he got involved simply by writing to Hellyer a couple of years back about some issue he cannot now remember and then meeting him at a function.

Professor B. J. Marcinek teaches history at Champlain High School in Ottawa and Hellyer invited him to speak for the intellectuals. He replied with an obscure little joke about Prime Minister Trudeau devaluing the title of intellectual by his current performance in the Ukraine. But he was mainly concerned later by what he felt to be the condescending attitude of the newsmen toward Action Canada; After all, he said, Trudeau was unknown not so long ago.

Hellyer acknowledges that it is a mixed bag of motives on which to launch a mass movement devoted to rescuing Canada from the other politicans, but he explains that you cannot be too choosy: "Someone voted for me once because he said I looked like George Hees. My reaction was that you take your support where you can find it."

So much for listening to the people in the new participatory democracy. Just sign on the dotted line, alongside the streamlined green arrow symbol.

And the frightening thought is that thousands of Canadians, frightened by inflation, fearful of unemployment, disillusioned by inept government and ineffective opposition, may do just that.

Commonwealth 'A Vital Forum'

Despite drastic changes the Commonwealth affords a vital forum where leaders of diverse nations can exchange views freely and frankly, Stuart Underhill said here Tuesday night.

The newly named publisher of the Victoria Daily Times was speaking at the annual dinner of the Royal Commonwealth Society at the University of Victoria Faculty Centre.

Drawing on his experience as a correspondent and news executive in London, Underhill said that in his opinion the press and public often were prone to seek sensation or crisis in Commonwealth relations where they did not exist.

"Those who support the Commonwealth ideal will serve it best if they try to understand the solid amount of work that is being quietly achieved within its framework," he said. "The most successful discussions between nations are usually the least spectacular.

"No constructive purpose is served by clutching at rumors or letting imagination build up a crisis every time the Commonwealth prime ministers meet."

—THATCHER

Saskatchewan Goes to Polls June 23

SASKATOON (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher Tuesday announced a Saskatchewan general election for Wednesday, June 23, and said the major issue will be a better method of solving labor-management disputes.

Mr. Thatcher, who turned 54 on victoria Day, said he will implement a labor-management court if his Liberal government is reutrned for a third term.

He led the Liberals to victory over the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, predecessor of the New Democratic Party, in 1964, and in the last election, on Oct. 11, 1967, his party improved its majority by three seats. However, the Liberals took only 45.6 per cent of the popular vote compared with 44.3 per cent for the NDP.

At dissolution, party standing in the legislature was Liberals 34, NDP 24, vacant 1. The vacancy arose in 1970 with the resignation of George Willis (NDP—Melfort-Tisdale).

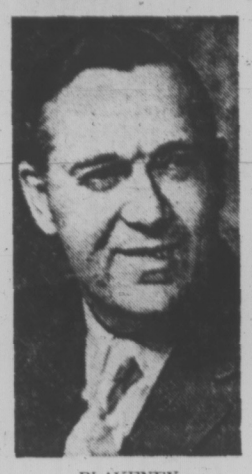
Liberal and NDP parties each has fielded a full slate of 60 candidates, an increase of one due to redistribution this year. The Conservatives so far have nominated only four candidates and Social Credit has said it will run no candidates provincially while it prepares for the next federal election.

However, Saskatchewan Progressive Conservative leader Ed Nasserden said Tuesday he hopes the voting will be so close that his party will hold the balance of power.

He said in an interview that the number of Conservative candidates will not be made public until Monday, June 7, nomination day.

The party has not been represented in the legislature since the 1967 election when former leader Martin Pederson was defeated.

Mr. Thatcher showed his usual flair for suspense in making the election announcement. Amid rumors that he would announce a date, he gave a brief talk on free enterprise versus socialism to a Liberal rally and then left the podium. A few moments later he reappeared and said he had an announcement—an election date.



BLAKENEY

NDP LEADER NEW

The New Democrats go into the election campaign with a new leader, Allan Blakeney, 45, Regina lawyer and Rhodes Scholar chosen to replace former premier Woodrow Lloyd last year.

Mr. Blakeney held two portfolios in the CCF government from 1960 to 1964. From 1960 to 1962 he was minister in charge of the government automobile insurance office and from 1962 to 1964 he was minister of health.

Mr. Nasserden, 52, of Saskatoon, a farmer and businessman was Conservative member of Parliament for Rosthern from 1958 until his defeat in 1968. He has yet to be nominated.

The Social Credit party leader is Joe Thauberger of Regina, who took over this year from Lloyd Avram of Indian Head when a split developed during attempts to achieve a partial union with the Conservatives.

Redistribution, says the NDP, distorted constituency boundaries to their disadvantage and a petition signed by 40 Regina voters was sent to Ottawa in March asking that the Privy Council disallow the legislation. Ottawa did not take any action.

Nomination day is Monday, June 7. Advance polls are open between Wednesday, June 16, and Monday, June 21.

Trudeau Goes Aboard Lenin

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

MURMANSK — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau today was shown through the world's most powerful icebreaker, the Lenin, which has a nuclear reactor that develops 44,000 horsepower through steam turbines.

Built in 1960, the Lenin was the flagship of the large Soviet icebreaker fleet until 1967 when she suddenly dropped out of sight.

It was believed in the West that her atomic power plant broke down and there even have been rumors among Canada's icebreaker captains that the Lenin may have exploded.

Those rumors fed on quiet cancellation of previously-announced Soviet intentions to build two more nuclear-powered icebreakers in a switch back to conventional powered-ships in 1968. The second atomic ice breaker was to have gone in service this year, had it been built.

ON DISPLAY

But the Lenin was on display here for the prime minister's gaze and two score reporters were allowed on her main deck although they were barred from following him below.

Trudeau said he did not see the reactor but did see the steam turbines and was told that the ship operates quite efficiently.

However, reporters were told by guides that the Lenin was taken out of service as a result of problems with the nuclear power plant and has only recently been returned to the fleet for limited operation of three of four months a year within a relatively short range of Murmansk, the world's most northerly large port well above the Arctic Circle.

MORE EXPENSIVE

Trudeau said Canada does not have the shipping traffic in the Arctic to justify a nuclear powered icebreaker — which costs about 30 per cent more to build than an equivalent conventional powered ship — as do the Russians.

He said that such highly-powered craft are not needed for St. Lawrence gulf service and, while the economics of extending the northern shipping season are still under study, Canada would not build for the sake of prestige.

Western authorities estimate that the Russians operate about 400 freighters and a nuclear icebreaker simply mually, transporting some 1 million tons of supplies and materials, across their "northern sea route" during the four-month arctic shipping season.

Most of then run here to Siberian coastal communities and also the Yenisey River — the equivalent of the MacKenzie River shipping route — but an occasional convoy is taken all the way across the Arctic to Vladivostock on the Pacific Ocean.

NEW ICEBREAKER

More than a dozen big icebreakers are used by the Russians for this service, the newest one the 15,300-ton displacement Murmansk built three years ago in Helsinki where most of the Soviet fleet has been launched.

The Murmansk is somewhat smaller than Canada's Sir John A. MacDonald and considerably less powerful than the Canadian 20,000-ton icebreaking flagship St. Laurent which puts out 29,000 horsepower.

Reporters were allowed to interview the Murmansk's skipper, Capt. Anatoly Lamekhev who has served 15 years in the Russian Arctic including the past 12 on icebreakers. The Murmansk, undergoing refit, was tied up alongside the Lenin.

Capt. Lamekhev said his 300-foot-long vessel had a working horsepower rating of 22,000 with a four-month cruising capability and has successfully broken lanes through pack ice about six feet thick and drift ice about 10 feet thick.

It is operated by a crew of 90 but for extended polar cruises its complement is 220 including 13 women.

Like the St. Laurent, the Murmansk has two spotter helicopters aboard.

It has been reported that three more slightly smaller ice breakers, with 21,000-horsepower diesel plants, are under construction but Capt. Lamekhev didn't discuss them and declined to answer questions about the Lenin because it was not his command.

He did say the Lenin had advantages over his newer ship because it's nuclear plant did not require refueling and also produced twice the horsepower.

'I DON'T KNOW'

But when asked if it was true that plans for two more nuclear icebreakers had been dropped, he replied "I don't know about that."

Capt. Lamekhev said he believed oil tankers such as the Manhattan would be practical ships for the northwest passage but said the Russians had no plans to use them on their northeast passage since they had not yet discovered a coastal or offshore oil field equivalent to the Alaskan North Slope. However, he said Russian oil tankers use the northern sea route to supply Siberian communities and have done so for some time.

CANADIAN OPERA STAR LANDS LONDON ROLES

LONDON (CP) — Canadian opera singer Lois McDonall has been chosen by the Sadler's Wells opera company for two major roles next season.

In August, the 20-year-old singer plays Constanza in Mozart's The Seraglio for two weeks at the company's London home, the Coliseum. The following month she takes the role of Countess Almaviva in Mozart's The Marriage of Figaro, which will run 10 days.

Now on a British tour with Sadler's Wells, Mrs. McDonall, native of Larkspur, Alta., joined the famous opera company last year after producer Anthony Besch spotted her in a Rossini production in Toronto and arranged an audition.

Mrs. McDonall, mother of two, studied opera at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto when she was 20.

TV Star's Ski Pole Punctures His Heart

BISHOP, Calif. (Reuter) — Western star Clint Walker, 43, today was reported in "fair to good condition" after a ski pole punctured his heart and he was taken 45 miles to hospital for open-chest surgery.

Walker, star of the television series Cheyenne and a number of western movies, was skiing in mountains near this southeast California desert town when his ski pole rammed through his chest.

The actor had no pulse and no blood pressure when he reached hospital an hour after the accident, but had a faint heartbeat when placed under the monitor in an intensive heart care unit.

Two surgeons performed open-chest surgery to repair a pierced heart ventricle which was pouring blood into a sac around the heart, hospital officials said.

Friends and Foes

IT IS CLEAR THAT THE APparent national unity which President Nasser bequeathed to his old friend Anwar Sadat only eight months ago has disappeared in the heat of ministerial ambitions and inner-party intrigue. President Sadat has arrested some 50 key figures in Egyptian politics, and claims to have found incriminating tapes and documents indicating an attempt to overthrow him.

The insurrection comes at a time when national unity is Egypt's greatest need, faced as the country is with an Israel determined to drive a hard bargain in the peace negotiations, if they ever come off, and a massive, friendly invasion by Russians on whom Egypt is totally dependent for its armament.

The plots and counter-plots of the current situation have not yet been clarified, but the arrested men are described as leftist and consistent supporters of closer Soviet ties. That tendency, it appears, is acceptable to President Sadat up to a point, but there seems to be a dividing line between those, like himself, who are becoming concerned about Egypt's independence, and others who see the U.S.S.R. as Egypt's chance to defeat Israel and become the undisputed leader of the Middle East.

Moscow is sufficiently concerned to rush President Podgorny to Cairo to investigate the situation at first hand, and the real strength of President Sadat will now be tested. The Egyptian crowds cheer Sadat and Podgorny both, although the arrested officials have ostensibly placed the two in opposite camps.

The Russians may be expected to preserve Egyptian defences in a condition to deter Israeli attack. But it is President Sadat who must cope with Egypt's chief internal problem, which is to pull the economy together, restore Egyptian revenues and foreign trade, and produce the reforms within the nation which in the end can be the only adequate base for the future of the people and the popularity of his regime.

With the country's revenues present and future swallowed up in the vast armament investment to which they are committed, the social and economic reforms will be correspondingly difficult. The prospect is that Egypt may become even more indebted to the Soviet Union, even more caught up in its friendly embrace. If President Sadat has by this week's action begun a retreat from suffocation he will have the difficult job of persuading the people that the real nub of their independence lies not in foreign entanglements, whether with friends or foes, but within themselves. The current test is not only of President Sadat but also of his people. And the results could have lasting reverberations throughout the Middle East.

Removing the Hazards

B.C. FOREST PRODUCTS' DEcision to mark and retrieve low-floating logs and deadheads in Cowichan and Nitinat Lakes shows a commendable sense of responsibility that might be applied more widely in this part of the world. The logs and deadheads present a hazard to the boating public and could be the cause of serious, even fatal, accidents.

As they are marked and towed away to holding grounds, risks will be reduced and the firm will find at least some return in the reclaimed timber.

The current campaign is a modification of earlier efforts by that company and by others at Cowichan Lake. Conceivably the arrangement could be copied in other bodies of water where there are booming grounds or towing routes — perhaps even in open salt water where deadheads are a constant menace to the increasing number of people who enjoy recreation afloat. In this day of high-speed pleasure craft, sail or motor driven, a deadhead can be as dangerous as a rock pinnacle — possibly more so because no charts can fix the location of moving, partly submerged logs.

Since, with few exceptions, these logs have been the property of some firm or other, there is a direct responsibility on the owner, or former owner, to see that they do not continue to be causes of danger.

Planetary Pollution

THE SUGGESTION BY THE United States consumer advocate Ralph Nader that Canada should take its southern neighbor to the World Court over pollution is the kind of hard-hitting, practical remark that has become the trademark of this man who makes a specialty of attacking American corporate and political malpractices. Mr. Nader made his comments in a speech May 19 before the annual meeting of the UBC Alumni Association in Vancouver.

But Mr. Nader is capable of distant vision, too, and his advice on permanent arrangements to combat world-wide pollution deserve attention: "New institutions," he said, "on an international scale can be developed to control pollution. We have a responsibility to our fellow man."

Governments around the world are beginning to respond to our fouling of environment and the time could be ripe for co-ordinated action on the dangerous deterioration of the biosphere. The World Court and "new institutions" to study and enforce anti-pollution standards could bring home the responsibility which each nation has as trustee for a part of the earth's surface. Internationalism begins with enforcing standards at home. We are residents not only of a country but of the planet.

Preserving History

IT IS FITTING THAT THE HISToric Sites and Monuments Board of Canada — scholarly appointees of the federal government representing every province—should have chosen Victoria for its annual meeting this week as British Columbia and its capital city celebrate 100 years of Confederation.

The city is indebted to the board for earlier decisions which guaranteed the preservation of such historic sites as Fort Rodd Hill and Craigflower Farmhouse, as well as marking notable sites here honoring such distinguished figures as Sir James Douglas, Amor De Cosmos and Emily Carr. Within the near future the name of Judge Matthew Baillie Begbie will be similarly honored.

As the board proceeds with its meeting here, members should be reminded of Craigflower Schoolhouse — one of the first schools built west of the Great Lakes and a suitable structure to be maintained as a recognized historic site in company with the farmhouse across the road.

FROM QUEBEC — By PAUL WHITELAW

A Bid for More French TV Content

IN RECENT WEEKS the Quebec government appears to have moderated its demands for jurisdiction over what it loosely defines as the "communications" field. Quebec's chief spokesman on this issue, its articulate communications minister Jean-Paul L'Allier, appears to have backed down from his earlier acceptance of a challenge by Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier to take the issue to the Supreme Court.

Mr. L'Allier has introduced legislation in the National Assembly which would give the province control over cable television. The bill would also give Quebec jurisdiction over most other forms of "communication," including broadcast television, radio, telephones and telecommunications.

But, Mr. L'Allier now says that his wide demands—except for jurisdiction over cable television — are up for "negotiation" with the federal government, which now controls the bulk of the contested field.

Mr. L'Allier, the most nationalistic of the ministers in the pro-federalist Bourassa cabinet, apparently hopes that his milder tone may induce Ottawa to re-open talks. He and Mr. Pelletier have been on notably bad terms since Quebec's intentions were made public more than a month ago.

The Quebec communications minister plans to ask for control over everything he and his advisers can think of and settle for somewhat less after the negotiations he hopes will take place.

The next move is up to Ottawa. As Mr. L'Allier won't apparently be going to the Supreme Court to test the legality of his bill, Mr. Pelletier will have to do so if he wants a judicial opinion.

The reasoning behind Mr. L'Allier's decision to seek negotiations presumably follows a closer examination of the legal justification of his arguments than his aides originally supplied.

Standing between Mr. L'Allier and a decision in his favor is a 1932 decision of the judicial committee of the Privy Council. The radio case noted that a distinction cannot be made between the transmitting and the receiving instrument. Cable television has apparently become part of the receiving system.

Aird Reference

Mr. L'Allier referred to the Aird Royal Commission on Broadcasting which wrote in 1929 that "the provincial authorities should exercise absolute control over the programs of the station or stations situated on the respective territory of the province."

The decision of the judicial committee superseded the suggestion of a Royal Commission with no law-making power. Likewise, the ideas of the Fowler report of 1957 are of little help to Quebec.

Mr. L'Allier says that Quebec wants control over the whole communications and broadcasting field so that the information which is distributed will reflect the different quality of French-Canadian life.

Negotiations, which would involve such intangible issues as the cultural aspirations of French-Canadians, would likely produce better results for the Quebec government than a showdown in the courtroom.

Among his other threats and demands, Mr. L'Allier has served notice that Quebec will start building one, and possibly two, ultra high frequency television stations before next spring.

Quebec will not be alone among the provinces if it has its own UHF station. The Ontario government is already operating its own station, Channel 19 in Toronto. But it was built by the CBC, whereas Quebec plans to construct its own facilities.

Quebec has the machinery to do this, through the auspices of Radio-Quebec. The provincial broadcasting network was set up in 1968 by the late Premier Daniel Johnson, but it has so far functioned only as a production company whose educational programs are aired by the CBC.

Program Content

What is more alarming than Quebec's plan for control over the "hardware" of communications, are Mr. L'Allier's designs on the control of program content.

The minister would like to use cable television, the potential of which is only becoming clear, for direct communication of information between the government and the citizens.

Mr. L'Allier maintains that the type of information broadcast by the government would be completely objective, designed only to explain the complexities of government to the average person.

Who would make the decision about the way some of the government's more difficult problems would be explained on a medium as subtle as television?

Mr. L'Allier has also made some controversial statements about the control of content on television programs which are broadcast over the airwaves, rather than by cable.

Quebec Production

He says he would have "no objection if 20 per cent of the television programs shown in Quebec come from elsewhere in Canada — so that Quebecers can learn about Canada — as long as 20 per cent of the television programs in the rest of the country come from Quebec."

The Canadian content on the French-language network of the CBC far exceeds the 50 per cent level demanded of all Canadian television stations by the Canadian Radio and Television Commission. A greater number of domestic shows must be produced for the French network, because there is not the same reservoir of programs which English stations can purchase from the United States.

In that context, Mr. L'Allier's demand for 80 per cent Quebec content (almost all of the French programs produced in Canada are produced in Quebec) is not too unreasonable. That is, until one considers his impractical demand that 20 per cent of the shows on English-television be produced in Quebec.

FROM CAIRO — By C. L. SULZBERGER

The Russian Lodgers Want Peace, Too

THERE is little doubt that President Anwar el-Sadat's emergence as Egypt's new strongman has improved the chances of Middle East peace. However, if no interim settlement on the Suez Canal and a partial Israeli pull-back can be arranged this summer there will probably be an extreme nationalist reaction here and reversion to military priorities. Even before Secretary of State Rogers' visit early this month there had been hints that Egypt was edging toward a formula. The ouster of conspiring anti-Sadat cliques has increased such hints. The plotters are being tarred as too close to Moscow and a quiet purge of lesser pro-Communists has started.

Sulzberger

Rogers left here convinced that Sadat really wants peace and is strong enough to make it stick — and he is far stronger today. While significant differences remain on an initial solution opening the Suez Canal, the U.S.A. is now talking specific issues with Egypt, not just arguing nitpicks.

When Assistant Secretary of State Sisco returned from Israel May 9, Sadat said he needed two weeks to study his report. Cairo wants a precise link between an interim canal accord and an overall final settlement. Washington urges they be kept separate because agreement on the first would improve atmospheric chances for the second.

Notwithstanding, there is today more possibility of peace than renewed fighting. Moscow apparently endorses this because it realized when Syria invaded Jordan last year that it was impossible to control a no-war-no-peace situation in this volatile area.

Diplomats here believe that the problem of Jerusalem is not insoluble provided Arabs have access to the Old City without requiring Israeli permission and that Jordan is guaranteed a fair share of tourism. Egypt doesn't covet the Gaza Strip and hopes it can be awarded to Jordan with a connecting access corridor — or to the Palestinian Arabs. Furthermore, there is some thought of trying to eliminate the Sharm el-Shiek question by drafting a kind of Montreux convention signed by all Red Sea nations and guaranteed by the great powers.

Militarily Confident

The Egyptians feel more self-confidence because of their refurbished military strength. Thanks to Russia they now possess about 1,500 tanks (compared to less than 1,000 before the six-day war); as much heavy artillery (about 570 pieces); as many armored personnel carriers (almost 1,100); as many jet fighters (365); as many jet bombers (69); 104 helicopters (as compared with 59 in 1967).

The striking difference, of course, comes in surface-to-air missiles and Soviet operational forces here. This spring Moscow flew in some (less than a dozen) souped-up MiG fighters — not, as often reported, the MiG-23 but a limited-production plane designed when Russia thought the U.S.A. would build a new generation of bombers.

This jet has unusual electronic equipment and special weapons and its arrival invigorated Egyptian morale but the recent airlift's particular importance came in SAMs and radar. The former included many new, mobile SAM-6s on tracked vehicles which have been stationed in upper Egypt to protect the Nile dams. There are probably more than 1,000 SAMs now in Egypt and a considerable proportion of them—plus the radar supervision and operations centre—are Soviet-controlled.

Russians in to Stay

Although Israel possesses perhaps the finest qualitative air force in the world and its technological advantage over Egypt is increasing, the Soviet weapons and Soviet presence strengthen Cairo immensely. Moreover, the Russians are here to stay.

Nevertheless, they want to reduce their operational military role (about 13,000 to 15,000 soldiers and airmen) and might start to shrink it if an interim Suez agreement is arranged. But they will continue to support military training and economic missions. The best the United States can hope for is not Soviet withdrawal (as Henry Kissinger once suggested) but competitive co-existence in the Nile Valley; and that is precisely what Cairo wants.

Washington knows it can't expel Russia from Egypt but it does hope to reduce the Soviet military presence. For its part, Moscow wants to avoid another unexpected explosion. Meanwhile Israel and Egypt imply beneath their public propaganda barrages that they are moving away from previously extreme positions.

The United States has taken the major decision to play a responsible, co-operative role in Middle East peace-keeping and to provide necessary guarantees for any settlement through the Security Council—where its ultimate veto power can be applied.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"PUT YOUR DOG ON. RUFF WANTS TO BARK AT HIM!"

Looking Back

From the Times of May 26, 1911:

The dishevelled condition which Vancouver Street has been compelled to exhibit since the boulevards were first laid down has been the cause of much comment by residents and not a little adverse criticism aimed at the powers that be. Questions have recently been asked the city engineer in regard to the matter and that official has contributed to the satisfaction of the curiosity of the questioners.

Letters

Incensed by Taxes

As a person living on a fixed income I am incensed at the incumbent mayor and some of the aldermen of our present City Council for astronomical increases in this year's taxes. In my particular case taxes have risen approximately 20 per cent in one year. This is unbelievable, especially due to the fact that people on old age pensions received a massive increase of 2 per cent.

The only alderman with any sense of financial responsibility to the public walked out of the City Council meeting, called to pare down the tax increase, in disgust. This man was Alderman Christie.

I sincerely hope the voting public remembers this in December.—Fed Up Taxpayer.

Hostages

It is a pity that the rest home association feels it must use the elderly people as a sort of 'hostage' against the government with an 'out they go' attitude, because of cost sharing for welfare cases. It is hardly the best way to seek inspiration for better results.

Rest home work may lack acclaim here but in the province of Alberta the government does the work for less than $100 per month. Many people live in Victoria outside rest homes on less than $173 per month.

If our government does not wish to encourage profit-making via the elderly, it should be easy to decree the principles of Alberta, so that the work may advance and that the elderly who suffer from the helplessness of age, mental or otherwise, should not be held as hostages because of a dispute in rates. — Mrs. B. Brazil, 675 Battery.

Maritime Museum

The recent presence of Prince Philip with the Queen and the Princess called to mind his last stay here in 1969, when he visited — among other places — the Maritime Museum of British Columbia in Bastion Square. He was scheduled to spend half an hour there. But he found the exhibits so interesting that he stayed a whole hour; and he ended by telling the chairman of the board of trustees that it was the best maritime museum he had seen in all his travels — except for the National Maritime Museum on the Thames at Greenwich.

What would he have said this time, had he known that the Victoria City Council was planning to close down our Maritime Museum's operations?

Dr. Foster of our Provincial Museum has clearly stated how impossible it would be to display our Maritime Museum collection — or even a sizable part of it — in his museum. The old Court House, on the other hand, is suitable for several reasons. It is part of Old Victoria, where the original fort stood, close to historic Wharf Street below, and to one of the chief "tourist" streets above; while Bastion Square still holds a flavor of gentler and more picturesque days than ours. Any other city would consider itself fortunate to be able to display one of the most important aspects of its history in such highly suitable surroundings. — Clifford P. Wilson, 2534 Vista Bay.

Country Needs Answer Which Trudeau Refuses

By CLAUDE RYAN
Le Devoir

Is Pierre Trudeau living in a world more and more cut off from Quebec? Or, the prisoner of a problematical narrowness that he has himself invented, will he more and more seek refuge in sophistry in order to avoid facing questions that are rightly addressed to him as chief of state of the federal government?

Whatever the explanation, Mr. Trudeau more and more adopts, in the face of difficult questions, attitudes which make him appear a stranger to the climate in which political debate is being carried on in Quebec.

In the supposition that Quebec might give its support to a separatist party, what would be the reaction of the federal government? Would it put into effect a series of procedures tending to infinitely complicate the execution of the popular will?

In the case of negotiations which were unproductive, would it threaten Quebec with an army of occupation? Would Ottawa follow the conduct of the central governments of Nigeria and Pakistan?

Or would it, on the contrary, be disposed to accept the popular decision and facilitate its coming into reality?

Strong Current For Separation

Barely a year ago these questions would have seemed theoretical. Since the election of April 1970 and the October Crisis they have become quite realistic. The April 1970 election has shown the existence of a very strong current and a very strong party seeking separation. The October Crisis has reminded us that as master of the army the federal government would, in the event of a crisis, have a trump card.

But while many English-speaking organs (for example, the Winnipeg Free Press, the Toronto Star, the Globe and Mail, the Canadian Forum) seriously pose the question, and while it is on the lives of Quebecers who closely follow politics, the prime minister of Canada, a Quebecer to boot, finds nothing better to say on this subject than these disconcerting words: "The question should not arise, because I do not take seriously the separatist hypothesis and because I am convinced the majority of Quebecers do not take it any more seriously than I do."

Moral Cohesion Seems Tenuous

Even Claude Lavergne of the somnolent "Dimanche Matin" could not contain himself in the face of this reply. As a citizen, Mr. Trudeau's refusal to consider the hypothesis of a separatist victory is his right; I would be the last to deny it. But as chief of the federal state whose moral cohesion has never appeared more tenuous than at this moment, he appears careless, haughty, unfeeling before a very real question — his attitude borders on irresponsibility.

The duty of the chief of state is not to pursue his own whims but to see the whole of reality, to honestly foresee all its possibilities. It is also to indicate clearly the attitude which he will pursue if a certain hypothesis should come to pass, especially if a hypothesis contains the germs of change or even great difficulticulties.

Cavalier Manner

By the cavalier manner in which he treats the very legitimate and very serious demands coming from Quebec, an English-speaking observer whose perspicacity is respected across the country confided to me the other day, Mr. Trudeau has strongly contributed to giving respectability to some anti-Quebec prejudices which are solidly anchored in certain sections of English Canada.

Elements which have never had the slightest sympathy for Quebec have suddenly discovered a feverish passion for the sacred cause of national unity. For better or worse they regard Mr. Trudeau's ambiguous message to their liking. And today one begins to see that they admire only through lip service the part of his message (notably the part on bilingualism) which would invite them to an exacting undertaking.

Mr. Trudeau was forewarned of this danger. Just the same he courted it with brilliance and electoral success.

Well, without pretending to ignore the new questions which have arisen and which now furnish the political dialogue in circles which think of other things desides electoral success, Mr. Trudeau risks once more conferring a dangerous respectability upon sentiments which have begun to circulate in important sectors of English Canada.

The Winnipeg Free Press has not, since last November, felt at all embarrassed reminding Mr. Trudeau that he would have the right to use force to keep Quebec in Confederation, if that were the wish of a majority of Canadians. Without going as far, the Globe and Mail has let it be known that Quebec alone cannot decide its own fate.

By refusing to clearly take a position on the important questions while they remain on a hypothetical level, Mr. Trudeau exposes himself, as he did last October, to have to improvise, in case of need, solutions which will exceed the range of the problems. He is especially exposed to leading Canada along a violent course which would be the negation of the great principles in whose defence he dedicated the first part of his career.

Is it really so difficult, Mr. Trudeau, to admit that the question you were asked May 7 is very real and that it demands of you, as chief of state, a frank and direct reply? The first duty of a political man, in the short and long term, is to serve peace. How can you not see that the peace of Canada is profoundly dependent on these questions which you refused to consider?

Didn't See Its Faults

In his book "The Prospect for Quebec" the sociologist Fernand Dumont of Laval comes down hard on this point: "In a future which is not far distant," writes Dumont, "historians will demonstrate that Mr. Trudeau destroyed the Canadian Confederation because he did not perceive its faults in time and did not propose serious reforms."

Questioned on this, Mr. Trudeau performed an easy pirouette: "An amusing criticism," he replied, "since Mr. Dumont, a separatist, wants precisely the destruction of Confederation."

In replying in that way Mr. Trudeau obtains an easy success. But, in addition to committing a grave injustice as regards Dumont, he shows that he has not read him and that he has understood nothing about his exposition.

Dumont, as so many others, was not born a separatist. He became one. If he became one this was not because he was dreaming of destroying the Canadian Confederation; he might have wished, on the contrary, that adequate adjustments had been found within Confederation.

Didn't Take It Seriously

Here is a further quotation: "If we arrived at the idea of separation," he writes in his latest book, "it is because Mr. Trudeau and his friends refused to take seriously the questions which most Quebecers were asking. We would have been expelled from the university long ago if we had exercised the legitimate authority which our tasks as professors confers on us with scorn towards those who question our theories."

TRUDEAU

Dumont's judgment may appear severe. Reread in the light of the cavalier attitude adopted on May 7 by Mr. Trudeau, it appears, through the fault of the Canadian prime minister, as a pitiless reality.

The Trudeau drama, in the eyes of history, will consist in having refused to try to penetrate the profound motives of men who, although having chosen a different option from his own, were not at all unresponsive to a Canadian project which took into account the new facts of today.

The "pastoral" function of the chief of state is to engage all those inclined to a new Canadian project in a dialogue with men like Dumont who, diverging in detail, are no less attached to universal things and no less rooted than he — that's the least that can be said — in the reality of Quebec.

With Mr. Trudeau, alas, the polemical spirit and, let's face it, the partisan spirit, have distracted him from the need for unity. With this paradoxical result: the more he triumphs in appearance the more the unity of this country appears fragile and superficial.

Invite Him To Go Home

By acting this way, Mr. Trudeau is precipitating the phenomenon of polarization that has been observed since he came to power. He is making more and more problematical this restoration with the French-Canadians of a minimal accord without which no long term peace is possible.

And he is preparing the day in which English-speaking opinion will demand from him recourse to the use of force and then this opinion, realizing that he has lost all vital contact with the dynamic elements of his own environment, will brutally invite him to "go home."

Mr. Trudeau will begin to regret the incomprehensible disdain in which he holds, from his loftiness, those who are among the best intellects that Quebec has produced and who have nothing, whatever he might say, of that narrow isolationism in which he loves, out of pure demagoguery, to dress them.

'First Claim to Our Beaches Must Be Held by Canadians'

By DALTON CAMP

"Deer are so common in some parts of Canada that veteran hunters often pass them up in favor of such rarer game as caribou, elk, Rocky Mountain sheep and Rocky Mountain goats . . . if hunting is your game, you'll find there's nothing quite like owning a piece of Canada's well-stocked wilderness."

I am quoting from a sales brochure entitled "Selecting Your Canadian Estate," published by a company known as Canadian Estate Land Corporation, which describes itself as a wholly owned division of Landwide Holdings Limited, a Canadian public company.

It is the business of Canadian Estate Land Corporation to acquire land in Canada suitable for recreational purposes, which the brochure designates as "parcels," and which range from 2½ acres in such places as Muskoka, Ont., upwards to 160 acres in or near Meridian, Sask. The parcels of land are sold to residents of the United States, for recreation purposes or for estate investment. ("There's a fortune being made in Canadian real estate!" says the brochure.)

Perhaps as pertinent a quotation as any to be found in the company's sales catalogue is this:

"It is not necessary to be a Canadian citizen or live in Canada in order to buy, hold or sell Canadian real estate. Buyers of Canadian lands are not required to reside on or make improvements unless they so wish. Taxes on vacant rural land are 25 to 50c per acre per year . . . Timber rights are usually included . . . Canada is one of the world's last unspoiled resort areas, and is the huge prosperous heart of this mushrooming vacation paradise."

With that going for us, Americans are invited to purchase 54 acres, including 1,500 feet of frontage on Newville Lake, in Cumberland County, Nova Scotia ($8,000); or 40 acres, including 300 feet of shoreline on Maquapit Lake, Queens Co., New Brunswick ($2,995); or 94 acres, including 1,600 feet "of beautiful pure white sand beach," in the Manitoulin District of Ontario (only $65,000). Similar buys are available in Quebec, Alberta, British Columbia and elsewhere. Anywhere in Canada, there's a land parcel for you, usually waterfront property and good beach.

About now, it must be made clear that the Canadian Estate Land Corporation, busily acquiring recreational properties in Canada and selling them in the United States, is acting fully within the law, and although they may exaggerate a little about the kind of fishing to be enjoyed on Maquapit Lake, they do not really say enough about the true value of their product.

It is absolutely factual that Canada is "one of the world's last frontiers," and it is nearly understatement to say that "people who buy land in Canada needn't fear interference with their right to quiet enjoyment of their property."

All the same, while holding no ill-will for the promoters of this enterprise, I am acquiring some profound reservations about the laws which make it possible, and profitable, or perhaps I should say, I have doubts about the lack of laws.

Among the things which characterize Canada, and Canadian life, is precisely what is so eagerly being sold away, which is the rare and quite accidental happening of a wealthy, resource-rich nation wherein a few people inhabit an enormous piece of property. But it is not a luxury to be assumed without responsibility, nor a legacy to be squandered.

The first claim to our recreation areas, and to our lakes and beaches, as to our wild-life, must be held by Canadians, most of whom are as yet unborn. A public policy which allows the inheritance to be given away without consent, or without the least regard for future need, is bad policy if indeed it is not criminal policy.

The argument runs, of course, that we have more land than we need or know what to do with. But the fact is that we do not. What such an argument does say is that for present purposes, under existing policy, there is enough recreational land to satisfy all those who (a) have access to it and (b) can afford it. And that leaves a lot of Canadians out of the equation, not to mention the oversight which Buckminster Fuller described as our present lack of a sense of posterity.

With each passing year, our national parks become more heavily used and densely crowded — by Americans as well as Canadians—and the signs are obvious that in terms of recreation areas reasonably near to our urban centres, we are very near to the point where we will see them exhausted. But even if this were not so, one would still doubt the wisdom of a policy which allows the selling off of whatever is presently left-over and is saleable.

This expression of opinion is not to be interpreted merely as another yawp from one of the "Yankee Go Home" set. Americans are good neighbors and they make good visitors. But Canadians have a right and duty to maintain their own resources, keep their future inventory and determine their own priorities.

It would seem to me sensible now to take stock of our present and future needs, and to begin to get stingy about giving away beach and waterfront property. There is appeal, at least to my mind, in allowing non-nationals only the right to lease land, for whatever time deemed appropriate by provincial authorities, and with the possibility of renewal.

But we ought to stop right now the policy of selling such lands to non-nationals. Otherwise, the time will come when "Buying Back Canada" will have a literal as well as a figurative meaning.

Yes, indeed, as the brochure from Canadian Land Estate Corporation says, "the country is founded basically on the principles of free enterprise . . ." But surely the time is come when Canadians can be a good deal more free tomorrow if we are a good deal less enterprising today in selling off acres and miles of our greatest inheritance.

THE PROVINCE
An Editorial

The federal government has done nothing to enhance the credibility of the Victoria constitutional conference by announcing that Opposition party leaders, who are to attend as observers, will be excluded from any closed sessions.

If and when Canada gets a new constitution the amendments must achieve unanimity in all legislatures.

That indicates the successful answer must arise from a concensus. Excluding a sizable element of the political community from some of the deliberations is hardly the way to achieve this.

How can they contribute fully to the debate that will create the eventual consensus when they are barred from full access to the reasoning processes?

A better question is why there should be any closed sessions at all in a matter of this importance in which it is imperative that the nation be kept fully informed.

If there are closed sessions the Opposition observers should attend. But what should be demanded is agreement by the participants not to hold any.

In a meeting considered as vital as this one in providing Canada with a new constitution, it is not enough that wisdom and justice prevail. In this era of instant communication they must be seen to prevail.

Picture in the Strait

By ART STOTT

The spinnakers blossomed in the Strait off our bay over the holiday weekend, bright petals lending color to the dancing sea. There has been heavier sailing traffic in this section of the Strait before, and no doubt there will be again, with the Swiftsure coming up in a few days.

★ ★ ★

On the weekend, the Thunderbirds were completing their elimination heats for the world championships here, starting in the second week of July, and, apart from determining who would qualify, the Monday races provided a good test of ability for boats running on a line from Harling Point toward Race Rocks. This stretch of water, according to the authorities, provides steadier conditions for competitive sailing than areas further to the northeast — and perhaps less congestion.

To those of us ashore, not concerned with the contest, the event lent a picture book grace to a grey day, preparing for the start, the craft wove intricate patterns in the sea, positioning, jockeying and lining up.

The rough-weather sailor, who brought his yawl south from the Queen Charlottes in the hopes of finding sufficient sunshine here to dress her in new paint, expressed a journeyman's admiration for the craft and their crews. "They know how to handle them, and they're getting better all the time."

To waterfront folk, sailboating is probably the most attractive of all spectator sporting events that have mushroomed in our affluent society. There is a sweep to it, a lightness that invites comparison to gulls on the wing. The ancient art of sail finds new refinement in boats specially designed, fabrics specially tailored from new materials to coax the most from vagrant breezes and to withstand the strain of a heavy blow.

These are craft removed in time and style from the clipper ships that ran luxury trade in tea and silks from the Orient. Yet in them is something of the tradition of speed, slender lines and a living quality that defies the mechanization of progress. The unity of man and ship and sail grows in pliant strength — a partnership that works with the elements, not against them.

Skill begins with the design of the hull, the calculation of the area of fabric it will handling, the deft estimate of carry, and moves up into the wind, of chop, and tide that goes beyond knowledge into a sense of feel, transmitted from practised hands to wheel and lines and into the almost sentient thing that is the boat.

You watch from shore. The wind scuffs the surface, piles up green waves, laced with white water. A turning boat catches the stiff breeze. The sails belly full. The craft heels over, breaking foam at the bow, drawing its scarf of white along the hull and leaving its swirling wake. Another joins it on the same tack, masts pointing parallel fingers obliquely at the sky. The spinnakers in their gay colors balloon full and the racers glide away, spanking the chop.

To those aboard, the run becomes a calculation to narrow the time around the turning buoy. To watchers on land, the spectacle broadens out, claims more of the horizon as each competitor sets his independent course.

★ ★ ★

Distance dwarfs the craft. Mainsails become light puffs of white far out against the blue of Olympic foothills, a work-a-day freighter plods up the Strait, smoke from its stack a black smudge funnelling out before it. A gull rides the wind, motionless, hangs briefly in the sky and then wheels away, wings outstretched.

The racing flotilla has created its picture once again, a delight to the eye, and an inspiration to imaginations that can also ride the winds.

Loblaw

The firm said its sales rose to $313.54 million during the year, compared with $276.4 million the previous fiscal year.

Net profit for the year was $3 million or $4 cents a share, up from the $2.8 million (76 cents, the previous year.

Cadillac

Net income dropped one cent a share in the quarter ended March 31, reports Cadillac Development Corp. Ltd. in a consolidated statement showing increased rental income.

The real estate firm had net rental income of just over $1 million vs. $904,459, but total operating income was lower at $1.19 million against $1.38 million.

Net income was $616,447 compared with $718,842 or 6.3 cents a share vs. 7.3 cents a year ago. Cash flow per share dropped from 17.6 cents to 16.1 cents.

Slower sales, due to economic conditions, contributed to the decline in performance, Cadillac said.

Scotia Bank

The Bank of Nova Scotia reports its balance of revenue for the six months ended April 30 was $39 million an increase of $8.45 million over the total in the comparable period a year earlier.

Balance of profit was $11.9 million or 70.6 cents a share for the six-month period, compared with $9.85 million (60.4 cents).

Assets at April 30 totalled $6.7 billion compared with $5.85 billion a year earlier.

Evans

The chairman and chief executive officer of Evans Products Co. foresees substantial increases in 1971 sales and earnings, helped by a first quarter increase of 76 per cent in net earnings.

Firmer plywood and lumber prices in the period helped boost income to $1.98 million (31 cents a share) vs. 16 cents a share last year. Other groups in residential construction materials also did better.

In 1970 the company netted $11.39 million ($1.83) after a 4 per cent stock dividend, on sales of $561 million.

Br. Aluminum

British Aluminium's $88.8 million new smelter at Invergordon, Scotland, is operational and will eventually save $36 million in imports from Canada.

The firm largest aluminum maker in Britain said the smelter has annual capacity of 100,000 tons and some metal already is being produced.

It said the saving on Canadian imports would contribute two-fold to British Aluminium's profits because the firm had only a part holding in the Canadian plant, and profits were subject to Canadian and British tax.

The company is enabled to remain competitive with European aluminium producers, even after British entry to the common Market.

B.A. Bank Note

British American Bank Note Co. Ltd. reports consolidated net earnings of $81,387, or 18 cents a share, for the first three months of 1971. Net earnings in the first quarter of 1970 were $86,199, or 19 cents a share.

cents share, for the first

GESCO

Net income dropped nearly $80,000 in the six months ended March 26, according to a statement by GESCO Distributing Ltd., of Toronto.

Sales were off from $13.9 million in the half last year to $13.25 million as business in the home furnishings division failed to take an upturn, leaving net income at $105,300 vs. $184,800 a year ago, or 10 cents a share against 18 cents.

April got off to a better start, with one of the best sales periods in company history, and forecasts for housing starts in the balance of the year support a brighter outlook.

Stellako

First well of its Auburndale oil field development program has been put into production, reports Stellako Mining Co. Ltd., which is working in partnership with Amalta Oils and Minerals and Kary Explorations, both of Calgary.

The Vancouver company has 20 per cent interest in about 7,000 acres, where oil from the Wainwright sand formation is encountered. Another formation, the Colony, also was intersected in the program, which will see further development.

In previous work on the property, six low-production oil wells and one gas well were completed.

Brycon

Shareholders of Brycon Explorations Ltd. have approved the acquisition of Chateau Chef Inc. of Seattle, an instant foods company, and renaming of the company as Brycon Indistries Ltd.

There will be no effect on the company's 1971 mining exploration and development program, which was to focus on Hyland River placer gold leases on the Yukon border and new prospects as they arise.

Brycon will have 10 million shares authorized, of which 2.97 million will be issued. Prior to reorganization, 3 million shares were authorized and 1.47 million issued.

Loomis

A 24 per cent increase in revenue is reported for the three months ended April 30 with significantly better net income, reports Loomis Corp.

The Seattle-based company had $4.86 million vs. $3.9 million in revenue, including subsidiaries, or $0.4 million in the six months compared with $7.6 million last year.

Net income rose in the quarter from $87,400 to $121,700 (16 cents vs. 11 cents a share); while in the half-year income went from $239,700 to $267,800 (31 cents to 35 cents).

Deere

Deere and Co., farm and industrial equipment manufacturer, reports higher sales and earnings for the first half of its 1971 fiscal year ended April 30.

Sales totalled $551 million compared with $520.9 million a year earlier. Earnings were $20.6 million, or $1.40 a share, compared with $19.2 million ($1.10).

For the three months ended April 30, earnings were $14 million or 96 cents a share ompared with $11.5 million (78 cents).

Wholesale Prices Up

The bureau's index, based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100, rose to 288.4 for April from a revised figure of 286.7 for March. In April last year the index was 288.5.

The index, based on pre-war values, measures changes in prices of a wide range of commodities in manufacturing and processing. It does not deal with retail prices.

In percentage terms, the index was up six-tenths of one per cent last month. Its difference from a year ago was barely measurable.

Higher prices were recorded for chemical products, wood products, non-ferrous metals, non-metallic minerals and iron products. Lower prices were recorded for textile products, animal products and vegetable products.

Soviet SST Touches Down on Threadbare Tires

By JONATHAN RANDAL

PARIS (WP) — The Soviet supersonic airliner landed in the West for the first time Tuesday, but the Tupolev 144's international debut left lay observers wondering about Moscow's supposed determination to challenge the British-French Concorde on world markets.

Write it off to hostile bourgeois press if you will, but judging from the photographers and television cameramen present at Le Bourget Airfield, the main interest in the needle-nosed Tupolev centred on its threadbare tires — all 26 of them.

The Tupolev, which to many a critical eye looks so like the British-French rival that it has been nicknamed the "Condordeski," also suffered the indignity of having to wait for a good half hour after landing before being able to discharge its passengers.

NO GANGWAY

There was no gangway big enough to fit its single door and when the Soviet airline Aeroflot employees finally found one they managed to scrape the paint of the aircraft in the process.

The professional aviation writers and other Westerners present for the arrival of the Paris Air Show opening Thursday, however, were obviously fascinated by the Tupolev and unimpressed by such minor shortcomings.

"Only normal," said one veteran aviation writer. "This is the original aircraft of the series and it has flown a lot."

Meanwhile, the Concorde, which French President Georges Pompidiou has flown to boost its prestige, fought back for the headlines by conducting its first intercontinental flight — 2,700 miles from Toulouse to Dakar in Senegal.

None of the high-powered Russians who arrived earlier in the day — such as Alexie Tupolev, the aircraft's chief designer, or delegation chief Pyotr V. Dementyev, the aviation industry minister — whispered a word about their delta-winged white with blue trim airliner.

Indeed chief test pilot Eudard Elyan took a dawdling two hours to fly from Prague to Le Bourget, a distance covered by a subsonic Boeing 727 in 90 minutes. For a half hour over the airfield, he wagged the wings, let the aircraft glide then came back for a landing watched by hundreds of onlookers lining the air show display area and perched on buildings.

MONSTER

Tail-down, its crab-like landing gear extended, the Tupolev made a leisurely landing thanks to two parachutes released to slow down its four jet engines.

Bobbing up and down with its needle-nose drooping for better landing visibility, the Tupolev looked like some prehistoric monster as it taxied to a stop near other Soviet aircraft at the air-show enclosure.

Soviet officials were in no mood to answer the key question: When would the Tupolev be ready to go into commercial service? The Soviets in the past have not discouraged trade chatter that the Tupolev would be flying commercially by 1972, some two years before the Concorde.

As for their advertised specificiations, there is little to choose between the Tupolev and the Concorde, which is a shade smaller. The Soviet aircraft claims a cruising speed of 1,560 miles per hour at 50,000 to 60,000 feet compared to 1,450 miles per hour for the Concorde. Claimed range for the Concorde is 3,600 miles plus a hefty margin, while the Soviet have been advertising 4,000 or even 4,500 miles for their airliner. Seating is said to be limited to 108 for the Tupolev compared to 128 for the Concorde.

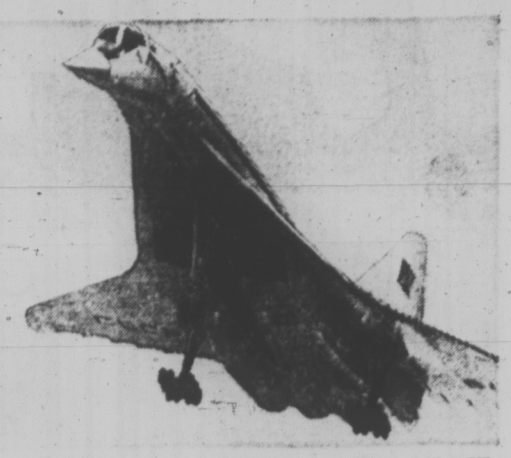
Purchase price for the Concorde is thought to be as high as $24 million to $28 million, while the Soviets, ever vague about costs, are expected to sell their Tupolev for as little as $20 million, happy to absorb any loss for a chance to break into world airline sales.

At present some 16 airlines have taken options on 74 Concordes, but the trick will be to convert them into hard and firm orders. No airline in the world, not even state-owned Air France, is enthusiastic about acquiring such high cost, extra fare aircraft at a time when the whole industry is fighting to absorb the costs of Boeing 747s and other wide-bodied subsonic jets.

The Russians' best sales chance apparently centres on airlines in Southeast Asia and the Pacific, especially companies like Air India headquartered in a country which attaches much importance to keeping good relations with Moscow.

If anything the presence of the Tupolev as a star entry at the Paris airshow is considered something of a godsend to those Americans still hoping against hope that Congress will back a U.S. SST.

"That Soviet bird is going to make us get on the ball," said one America aerospace employee watching the Tupolev. "The competition is not going to stop. Maybe we can get Congress to vote again."



TUPOLEV 144, Moscow's entry in the world SST sweepstakes, glides to a landing in Paris Tuesday, its first visit to the western world. Soviet officials have hinted the Tupolev will be on world markets by 1972. (AP Wirephoto)

BIGGEST, FASTEST SIT SIDE BY SIDE

PARIS (UPI) — The world's biggest airplane, the American C5A Galaxy, and the Anglo-French supersonic Concorde landed today to join the Soviet supersonic TU-144 at the Paris Air Show which opens Thursday.

For the first time, the largest aircraft and two of the fastest aircraft were side by side.

The Concorde returned today from Dakar, Senegal, where it flew Tuesday in 2 hours and 20 minutes on a 2,594-mile trip that normally takes five hours. Chief test pilot Andre Turcat said the plane behaved "magnificently" on the trip that was equal to a trans-Atlantic flight.

AMERICAN-INSPIRED DRIVE

Saigon Airport Smuggling Attacked

By PETER OSNOS

SAIGON — Saigon's still bustling Tansonnhut Airport, at the peak of the war the world's busiest, has become the focus of an American-inspired South Vietnamese drive against smuggling.

Duong Thieu Sinh, director general of customs, said that the total number of customs officials, policemen and security agents replaced at the airport in a week reached almost 1,000.

The newly assigned officials, acting under what they say are strict orders, keep a close watch on customs and baggage areas that were once open to all comers including these loaded down with luxury items, gold and narcotics.

U.S. sources said that starting in April American customs advisers were assigned to the airport on a seven-day-a-week basis. There are 11 American advisers on loan from the U.S.A. customs department.

The campaign is ostensibly directed at all kinds of smuggling, but American officials, increasingly alarmed at the extent of heroin use by servicemen, have clearly placed the highest priority on curbing the flow of drugs.

One of the highest ranking Americans in South Vietnam has been telling visitors lately that combatting the heroin problem now should be regarded as equal to prosecution of the war, as far as Americans are concerned.

Rampant, smuggling, like widespread official corruption, is a fact of life in South Vietnam. Both are periodically fretted over but remain seemingly irreversible drags on the country's strained economy.

DRIVE SUCCESS

The Tansonnhut drive, however, which began in earnest last month, is already being declared a success by the American advisers whose complaints about the extent of smuggling became so insistent that something had to be done.

In a report that won vigorous praise from top American officials, one adviser wrote in February: "The sole function of customs at the airport seems to be to assist the smugglers to bring in the contraband without hindrance."

The same report, one of a series prepared by Joseph R. Kvoriak, said the situation had reached a point at Tansonnhut where customs officials were "totally ineffective and (had) no control whatsoever."

Geyser Power Pollution Answer?

THE GEYSERS, Calif. (AP) — Ecologists hail it as a pollution-free source of competitively-priced electricity.

Farmers tilling the southwestern United States deserts hope it can be harnessed to take salt from sea water and underground pools of brine to make farmlands bloom.

It's all part of an upsurge of interest in geothermal energy — deposits of steam and hot water beneath the earth's crust throughout the western United States.

Largely ignored in the U.S. while other countries pioneered its development, geothermal power is coming under new scrutiny because of growing power shortages, increasing air pollution from fossil fuel power plants and the real or imagined danger from nuclear power stations.

The principle is simple: drill a well into an underground chamber of steam or hot water and pipe the steam that rushes to the surface through turbines to generate electricity. Then use the excess heat to desalt sea water or brine.

But although geothermal energy at first examination appears to be an ecologist's dream, it is fraught with problems, some of which can cause pollution of their own.

Power companies are taking a new look at the energy source, but many utility officials don't expect it ever to be more than a supplemental energy source.

"Geothermal energy is not likely to command a very high percentage of the total energy market," says J. D. Worthington, vice-president for engineering at Pacific Gas and Electric. The utility operates the only geothermal power plant in the United States at The Geysers, 100 miles north of San Francisco.

But others outside the utilities disagree, saying power from underground heat in the west in the next 50 to 100 years could rival nuclear energy.

PG and E's facility at The Geysers is in the bottom of a remote canyon in the Mayacmas Mountains where hot springs and steam vents were discovered in 1847. No smokestacks belch fly ash, nitrous oxides or sulphur dioxide into the clear mountain air. No nuclear fuel heats water to turn turbines. The 82,000-kilowatt facility is being expanded to 600,000 kilowatts by 1975.

CAN'T DUMP WATER

But the geothermal field at The Geysers is small. Geologists say there are areas with much greater potential throughout the west — in Arizona, Wyoming, Oregon, Montana, California and Texas.

Pacific Gas and Electric had to overcome several problems to turn The Geysers facility into a profitable operation.

After the steam is condensed, the mineral-laden water poses a disposal problem. PG and E was ordered to stop dumping its water into a creek and now pumps it into an old well where, presumably, it recirculates and is heated again.

Steam reaches the earth's surface at a low pressure and can't turn ordinary turbines designed for high pressure steam made by burning coal, fuel oil or natural gas. Special turbines manufactured in Japan are required.

DIVERS TEST BUBBLY FIND

FOLKESTONE, Eng. (AP) — Prowling 100-foot depths in the English Channel where a French coaster sank 15 years ago, a Folkestone divers' team headed by Dennis Pearce salvaged 60,000 bottles of champagne. After an impromptu party, a spokesman said: "The champagne was in pretty good condition. By the end of the day the men weren't." What's left will be sold at a profit after payment of customs at $4.32 a gallon.

JAPANESE TURN TO ELECTRIC CAR

TOKYO (Reuter) — The Japanese government has allocated $14 million during the next five years to develop an electric car mainly for use in the country's pollution-clogged cities.

Experts estimate that widespread use of such a vehicle could cut existing city pollution levels by two-thirds.

Research will be conducted by government experts and private firms to produce a whole range of electric-powered vehicles — private cars, cargo-carrying vehicles and passenger buses.

They hope to have a prototype on test runs in 1973.

One drawback of electric cars so far produced around the world is that their batteries are extremely heavy and generally have to be recharged constantly. This makes them impractical for wide use.

The car will have to be capable to speeds in excess of 105 miles an hour for the cargo-carrying vehicles and more than 50 miles an hour for the passenger cars.

The batteries must last between 80 and 95 miles before recharging in the case of the trucks and 110 to 125 miles for the cars.

Officials in charge of the program also want to develop a battery with a life of one to two years that does not occupy more than 30 per cent of the gross vehicular weight and is easy to maintain.

SFU Team to Take Trip 500 Million Years Back

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Simon Fraser University biologist will take a trip 500 million years into the past this summer to study a marine animal that has amazed scientists because of its complexity and precision.

The animal is called the chambered nautilus, and Dr. Norine Haven, along with two assistants, will spend four months in the Philippines collecting and studying the animals and their eggs.

"The nautilus is the sole survivor of a family of animals which inhabited the ocean 500 million years ago," Dr. Haven says. "At that time, plant life was just emerging on land."

Scientists have found that the walls of the shell form a strict mathematical curve, known as a logarithmic spiral.

The creature is also able to rise from the bottom of the ocean floor to the surface by filling some of the inner chambers of its shell with nitrogen gas.

Dr. Haven says these mysteries have contributed to a mythology which has grown around the nautilus.

"Sailors a century ago reported they saw hundreds of them sailing on the ocean," she says. "Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote a poem about them and there are some references to them in medieval literature."

Dr. Haven says the animal has not been studied intensively, and her study should give biologists clues about the evolution of cephalopods, a group which includes the octopus and squid.

EDUCATOR

Mexican Deplores Academic Tourism

MEXICO CITY (CP)—A leading Mexican educationist urged Canadians Monday to avoid the approach taken by many Americans toward Latin America—the attitude that works on the basis "this is how we do things at home."

Victor Urquidi, president of the Colegio de Mexico, told a meeting of the Canadian Association of Latin American Studies that while there are some Americans who do not follow this practice, the majority do.

He suggested that Canadians avoid what he called "academic tourism" by sending first-class economists, sociologists and anthropologists to study in Latin America for a minimum period of one year.

"We don't want half-baked experts coming here to tell us how to solve our problems," he said. "Coming down here for a three-week holiday or even for a summer isn't enough. You have to get to know the people and their way of life."

He added that Canadians shouldn't come to Latin America with the idea of changing the Latin peoples.

"We are two different peoples and you must accept this."

PLEASED BY INTEREST

Urquidi said he is pleased that Canadian interest in Latin America is on the increase and he hopes that in future it will be possible to arrange student exchanges between the countries.

His comments followed presentation of a paper to the CALAS meetings by Herman Konrad, a professor in Latin American studies at University of Calgary.

Konrad said Canada relies heavily on the U.S. for advice on Latin American studies, but "the program models represented by American institutions should not be the ones Canada strives for."

Konrad said there are grounds for skepticism regarding the development of something new in Canadian academic relations with Latin America because the present Canadian mileau in many ways is merely an extension of developments in the U.S.

"Our common benefactor and burdensome neighbor is not going to vanish, but on the contrary, become increasingly more visible.

SHOULD SEE CANADA

"Nevertheless, I would insist that as far as academic relationships between Canada and Latin America ase concerned there is a great promise for something new."

Konrad sugested that students and teachers from Latin America go to Canada to examine society from their perspective.

"I submit that Canada desperately needs this, that funds, programs and resources might be profitably . . . channelled in this direction."

Jack Ogelsby, a professor at the University of Western Ontario, said the Canadian government probably will follow the pattern of Canadian-Latin American relations pursued since 1867 a period in which not much has changed.

Trade investment, communications, education and development would be the major thrust.

"But will the present government really do much more than has been done in the past?" he asked. "I suspect not. After all the fanfare given the government's 1968 mission . . . the foreign policy report showed how modest was the government's intentions."

He added that the trade and commerce department will continue to try to persuade Canadian businessmen to become more competitive, "but without much success."

This is because Canadians have secure markets for their products elsewhere Japan, Europe and the U.S.—and as long as this is the case "they won't get off their butts to move into Latin America."

Miguel Wionczek, a Mexican economist, said:

"Why should Canada meddle in Latin America which is really an area of speial interest to the United States?"

Fernando Camara, deputy-director of the Mexico Museum of Anthropology, site of the meetings which end Thursday, told a general session that studies of Canadian-Latin American relations "need a great deal more imagination."

It was not enough to travel 3,000 miles to say hello and recreate old ideas.

"We have to bring up contradictory subjects," he said. "We have to have new ideas. I'm not preaching to you to forget the past, but I ask you to look for new perspectives for the future."

About 200 registered delegates attended afternoon sessions, but the general discussion, of which Camara was chairman, drew less than 30.

Politics Taking Back Seat at the UN

By The Associated Press

The silver anniversary of the United Nations may have been rated as less than a smashing success, but it did drive home the point that the world forum must place less accent on political issues and more on economics and social problems to serve its purpose of helping man.

Speaker after speaker told the 25th General Assembly that development, environment and population questions should receive prime attention in the future.

This moved UN officials to point out that, whereas the political debates in the assembly and Security Council steal the spotlight, the United Nations is actually spending 85 per cent of its budget on economic and social projects.

Centrepiece of the UN aid effort is the development program, an international body set up in 1965 under Paul Hoffman and designed to conduct surveys that provide the basis for big-scale development projects to be financed by other sources if proven feasible.

Survey teams of the UNDP have identified rich mining deposits in many parts of the world, including copper in Argentina and Panama, iron ore in Chile and uranium in Somalia. These deposits have an estimated worth of about $12 billion.

Similar surveys have resulted in a sweeping program to modernize fishing methods in the Philippines and launch of $240 million industrialization project in war-weakened Nigeria.

Over the past 11 years, the UNDP and the UN Special Fund which preceded it, have financed more than 1,200 such survey projects at a cost of nearly $3 billion, of which $1.7 was contributed by the recipient countries.

Hoffman has estimated that by 1976, his agency will carry out projects worth nearly $1 billion a year.

Success of the program has raised hopes that the United Nations will indeed expand its role as promoter of economic and technological development for the poorer nations.

One achievement of the 25th anniversary session was the adoption of a 10-year program for development of the needy nations. It includes a commitment by the rich powers to allot one per cent of their gross national product for aid to their poor brethren.

I also calls for commitments by the depeloping countries on how they would spend their own resources to achieve the speediest growth possible.

Hoffman generated enthusiasm for his program to improve the lot of the poorer UN members by noting that few countries were the average personal income was more than $750 a year had undergone any major upheaval in the past decade. Of countries with a per capita of less than $100, he noted, more than two dozen had suffered an average of two outbreaks of violence.

UN officials point out, however, that the responsbibility lies not only with the big powers but also the underdeveloped countries, many of them plagued in inflation and demanding operating with high rates of foreign exchange.

S. Africa Censorship Tightens

By PETER GREGSON

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter)

Censorship is being tightened in South Africa, despite mounting internal opposition.

The lower house of Parliament recently passed an amendment to the already rigid censorship laws, extending a cloak of secrecy over the Publications Control Board, the over-all censorship watchdog, and permitting it to establish its own "investigator corps."

The amendment was presented to the House twice. A public outtery greeted its first appearance and forced retraction and modification before the second attempt.

Even so, its passage through the House was stormy. Opposition speakers decried the Publications Control Board as a dictator of South African thought and said it was so bigoted and narrow-minded that it had become a laughing-stock.

Much was made in the debate of the position of the local magazine Scope which had seven recent issues banned and appealed to the High Court in all seven cases.

BOARD OVERRULED

In three cases heard so far, the court overruled the board and awarded damages at a cost to the taxpayer of more than $14,000.

In the heat of the debate, Deputy Interior Minister Schalk van der Merwe, who had the task of guiding the amendment bill through Parliament, declared there was no censorship in South Africa.

Last February, however, Interior Minister Theo Gerdener disclosed that 5,758 publications had been banned since 1963.

An index of objectionable literature, compiled from government gazettes which announce the bans, lists almost 13,000 books as prohibited in South Africa.

Films, magazines, books and plays are banned or allowed only in expurgated versions here on the grounds of objectionable politics, nudity or violence—usually in that order.

Anything on multi-racialism or communism is out. So are Playboy magazine and such films as Bonnie and Clyde.

Fish Gear Recovered

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — The fisheries patrol boat G. B. Reed met no opposition as it sailed into disputed waters off Alaska to retrieve fishing gear worth 2,000 $abandoned by a British Columbia halibut fisherman.

The gear was cut loose by the fishboat Anthony J. when the United States Coast Guard cutter Cape Romain attempted to seize he vessel, which was about 2½ miles off Cape Chacon, Alaska.

Lava Flow To Bypass Village

FORNAZZO, Sicily (AP) — A river of flaming lava poured to within 100 yards of a bridge on the northern outskirts of Fornazzo today, but it appeared headed to bypass the village.

Authorities withheld the order to evacuate the 500 villagers. There was hope that even 16 homes on the edge of the village would be spared.

The laval was advancing at a slightly slower speed than the 30 yards an hour it moved Tuesday night. It was following a shallow gulch that could channel it past the village into a large basin of the Fontanelle Valley just beyond Fornazzo.

Officials said the valley could hold a vast amount of molten rock and if it overflowed the laval would join an older lava stream headed harmlessly down the Cavagrande dry gulch toward the Ionian Sea.

TELEVISION at Cowichan Senior Secondary involves students in all aspects of televising events. The Student Producers: Now They Got a Channel

By DONNA CLEMENTS

It is Channel 3 on Cowichan cablevision.

Jev Tothill, educational television co-ordinator for Cowichan school district, says that Cowichan Senior Secondary is probably the only high school in the world that operates a station.

Tothill has been working on the establishment of the station with the local cablevision company for the past four years and it was just instituted two weeks ago.

"It is a real asset to the community because now we can show community projects," he explained. As well as broadcasting pre-recorded programs by ETV students, highlighted on the channel will be Cowichan Quiz, which is a Reach for the Top style of show with local elementary school children featured.

Not only is the ETV course an asset is an introduction into the large field of communication but it also teaches students responsibility and teamwork stressed 42-year-old Tothill.

"I hope students will have a more confident mental attitude in future jobs with the confidence they have gained by operating sophisticated equipment," he said. "I don't just mean in communication work. I hope they can transfer their skill and confidence to any type of job."

Since ETV was introduced in the Cowichan school system six years ago more than 300 students, one-third of them girls, have completed the course. Tothill, who has been the only ETV teacher at Cowichan, said there are always more applications for the course than the school can handle.

Officially ETV is a one-year course but Tothill finds that

"I find second-year students a real asset to me and to the school district because they are experienced when we go out on location," he said. "It takes at least a year for a student to get fairly well-oriented.

●

Students, who usually take the elective course around Grade 11, learn to operate sophisticated production equipment such as cameras and video equipment.

"The production equipment the students work with is no more expensive than equipment in the physics or electricity lab." Tothill said.

When the ETV class goes out on location it usually involves an executive producer, a technical producer, a producer of the show, three cameramen, a switcher; a video tape operator and a control operator.

Every student learns everyone of these functions. With this complete training a good student can step right into a community cablevision broadcast facility, Tothill said.

Although the students go out on location often, to televise functions such as the Queen's visit, school track meets, scenes from the Forest Museum and other events, Tothill said they also write and produce shows of their own.

As well as being an asset to the community when they televise functions of community agencies ETV's largest contribution is to the school district.

"We have a regular service where we record programs from Channel 9, the educational program from Seattle," Tothill said. Each week these programs are sent with a video tape-recorder to six elementary schools that do not get cablevision.

Tothill said the reward from the educational programs is that material is presented on subjects that is not readily available to students otherwise.

"Students can actually see what they are learning or discussing in class rather than having to depend on being told about it. The program assists in teaching as well."

Pulp Workers Face Layoff

GOLD RIVER—About 360 pulp mill workers will be laid off from June 6 to July 2 as a result of a "steadily weakening pulp market," Tahsis Co. manager Denis Catford announced Tuesday.

The pulp mill is the town's main employer, but the shutdown won't affect the economy too seriously because most workers would take their holidays during the shutdown and thereby reduce the time during which they lose wages.

Following their holidays the workers will be eligible for unemployment insurance.

Bill Mewhort, president of Local 11[4] of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, said the company had tried to avoid the shutdown.

"Let's face it, the workers are probably the smaller losers. This company is one of the more profitable ones and if there had been any way to keep operations going they would have done it. The company is going to lose a lot more than the workers will."

B.C. Forest Products' Crofton pulp mill will have a partial shutdown from June 13 to July 12. One pulp machine will stop production, but it's not known how many men will be affected.

BCFP's Point Ellice sawmill has been closed since February and its Youbou mill has been shut down since April.

Company spokesmen could not say today whether any further closures will be needed this summer.

Cable Work Awarded

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pirelli Cables and Conduits Ltd. of Richmond has been awarded a $104,000 contract to supply submarine power cables to be laid down by B.C. Hydro this summer to two remote communities in British Columbia.

One project will consist of three 25,000-volt cables from Cormorant Island to Malcolm Island, on the northeast coast of Vancouver Island near Alert Bay. The new cables, each 8,600 feet long, will supplement the existing 12,500-volt underwater cable.

Another 25,000-volt connection will be made from Skidegate to Sandspit in the Queen Charlotte Islands. This single cable, 18,000 feet long, will replace one of three existing cables which has been damaged beyond repair by winter weather.

Japanese Car Prices To Jump

TOKYO (Reuter) — Leading Japanese car manufacturers are planning to raise their export prices in the United States to slow down a sharp increase in American imports of Japanese cars.

Toyota Motor Co. said the price increases would be enforced from September, but could not disclose their extent.

Nissan Motor Co. said another reason for raising its export prices was to prepare for a revaluation of the yen, but Toyota said this was not a factor in its calculations.

Both Nissan and Toyota also cited increased costs, including expenditure for anti-pollution and safety devices, as partly responsible for the price rises.

They also said the increases would slow down their export drive and appease U.S. opinion against increased car imports.

Toyota shipped 56,493 vehicles to the United States in the first quarter of 1971, an increase of 65 per cent over the corresponding period of 1970. Nissan's first quarter exports totalled 42,609 vehicles, a 201-per-cent rise.

Piecemeal Tax Systems Criticized

BRISBANE (Reuter) — A Canadian economist today described tax systems in Canada and Australia as "hodgepodges" built up piecemeal over the years, and urged Australia to carry out wholesale tax reforms.

Prof. John Helliwell of the University of British Columbia told the Australian and New Zealand Association for the Advancement of Science that in many ways Australia is more conducive to tax reform than Canada.

He said that in Australia at present, capital gains are not taxable unless from the sale of an asset required for the main purpose of reselling at a profit.

The professor said there could be little relief in the equity of a tax system that left untaxed such obvious increases in economic power.

VICTORIA DAILY NEWSPAPERS

Introducing New Five Roses Sauce & Gravy Mixes.
Yes mother, they are mixes. But . . . we didn't do everything. Instead, we've allowed for you to add a fresh ingredient: butter, meat drippings or milk. The finishing touch. (For cook-outs though, you'll appreciate our Bar-B-Q Sauce. It's complete in the package.)

This means you make them richer, smoother, tastier. And have more interesting and unusual ways to use them. And, lots more mix for the money.

Yesterday you had to start from scratch. Today, there's a whole new way.

New Five Roses Sauce & Gravy Mixes.

West Coast 'Stop Gap' Approved

A stop-gap effort to keep the existing West Coast trail clear of new growth and to repair dangerous bridges and ladders has been approved by Ottawa under the Opportunities for Youth program.

Approved was work totalling $4,600, only 14.3 per cent of the original request.

The first application, costing $32,000, and to employ 16 persons on four sections of the trial, including opening new areas, was rejected as too costly.

Three students will now be involved, mainly to clear trails of new growth and repair dangerous bridges and ladders.

Gain said the three hired this year, as well as doing maintenance work, will also compile a study, with the help of national parks, in developing an annual program to improve the trail — rough campsites, new beach trails and more garbage disposal areas.

Ottawa Tuesday approved projects totalling $1,152,511 of which $173,732 went to B.C. centres.

Victoria Man, 22, Charged In $12,000 Clothes Theft

A 22-year-old Victoria man was charged Tuesday with breaking, entering and theft after clothing valued at more than $12,000 was stolen last week from the White House men's wear store, 852 Fort.

Judge Edmond St. Jorre set bail for Thomas David Cogley, 724 Yates, at $10,000.

Cogley asked to be remanded to Monday for election of trial method and possible plea. He is also facing a charge of possession of stolen property over $50.

Robert James Smith, 20, of 323 Michigan, was remanded in custody by St. Jorre after he pleaded guilty to possessing stolen clothing last Thursday in Victoria.

St. Jorre remanded Smith to June 7 for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

BRIEF CHASE

A city policeman testified that Smith with another person put "seven large plastic bags" of clothing in a clothes closet of an apartment at 323 Michigan about 11 a.m.

The bags were put there, the officer said, with the permission of the suite's occupant.

The policeman said some of the clothing was moved to other parts of the building and Smith and another person were apprehended by police late Friday after a brief chase that started in the locker area of the building.

The clothing, the officer said, belonged to the White House shop and police had recovered about 85 to 90 per cent of the original loss valued at $12,196.

Committee Approves Canvass

Ewan Rowntree, 1684 Hampshire, was given approval by Oak Bay's works committee Tuesday to canvass his neighbors in an effort to get the works program for Hampshire amended.

Rowntree appeared before the committee to protest the proposed relocation of boulevard lawns to edge the curbs instead of the owners' properties.

He said that such a move would end up in "non-boulevards" because the grass would be killed by the heavy traffic of school children. Rowntree said he favored the proposed road widening but felt that the changing of the sidewalks would lower property values.

An appeal by Jerry Gosley for publicizing his Smile Show during its nine-week run at Oak Bay Junior High received support from Oak Bay's streets and traffic committee.

They approved Gosley's request to place flags and shields on lamp standards near the school and expenditure of about $200 to switch on the colored lights in the area. They also agreed that Gosley could string a banner across the road, providing approval was also given by the B.C. Hydro, whose poles would be used.

The parks and recreation committee agreed that recreation director Mrs. Isabelle Craig be permitted to run a two-week day camp this summer.

The decision on other camps would be made after a report was received on whether the first had sufficient enrolment and proved self-sustaining.

Municipal engineer Geoffrey White was instructed to continue negotiations with school board officials on the possibility of cost-sharing maintenance of playing fields at Uplands school. This would be done on a 50-50 basis for one year only if both parties agreed.

The streets and traffic committee ordered no exit signs to be posted at the entrance of Clive Drive and York Place.

Council Re-Enacts the Past

Past and present became one Tuesday when today's Saanich council re-enacted an old time meeting in historic Craigflower school house, the oldest west of the Great Lakes, and now a museum. Attired in old costume, the meeting abounded in anachronisms—Edith Gunning on council before women had the vote, Alan Newberry wearing Georgian period clothes, nine council members instead of the seven when Saanich was incorporated in 1906. But the meeting proved interesting and at times humorous as council discussed such problems as smoking locomotives, dumping of raw milk, sidewalks, street lights and skinny dippers at the Beaver Lake filter beds.

* * * *

Labor Disruptions Decrease

The frequency and severity of strikes and lockouts in 1970 across Canada decreased compared with 1969.

The Labor Gazette, official publication of the federal labor department, reports 540 disputes during the year compared with 595 in the previous year.

The disputes involved 261,187 workers (306,799 in 1969) and lasted 6,539,560 man-days (8,057,060 in 1969).

The lost time represented .39 per cent of the estimated working time, compared with .48 per cent in the previous year.

The figures cover strikes and lockouts lasting 10 or more days. The number of workers involved includes all reported on strike or locked out, whether of not they belonged to the union directly involved, but workers indirectly affected, such as those laid off as a result of a work stoppage, are not included.

THE FOSTER PLAN

Wanted: A Chance For a Sad Child

Gerald, 12 years of age, is fair and slight with terrific appetite. His temporary foster parents have made him feel he is wanted and worthwhile. He is trying hard to make up for all he has missed in his earlier years. Is there a family in Greater Victoria who would like to make this lad a permanent part of their family?

Charlie is 11 and lives up-Island. Thanks to heart surgery he can now begin to lead a normal life, but needs the physiotherapy of the George Pearkes Clinic. A foster family who lives within busing distance of the clinic is needed.

Andrea is almost six years of age, of Indian background and appearance. Raised as an only child, she does not know how to play with children her own age. Needs foster parents who can help her get over the death of the person who raised her.

★ ★ ★

The trail that I've blazed across the jungle of the newsroom to my desk happens to pass the swamp of the city editor and as I went that way, having just come from a two-hour briefing at the Family and Children's Service, I heard a familiar lament.

"It's a lousy news day," the city editor was dourly informing the news editor. "Just nothing seems to be happening out there."

Regrettably, we come to think that way in this business, to assume that news is made only by happenings rather than the day-in-day-out life of the city. On that particular day, for example, we'd have been fully justified in going to press with an eight-column banner line: Epic Drama Here in 327 Homes.

Even a cursory investigation into the workings of the foster parent plan under that agency is an overwhelming experience for someone unfamiliar with it. In those 327 homes from Sidney to Sooke there's truly a continuing, real-life drama of selflessness, dedication, enormous patience, joy and love that makes the unlikeliest soap opera seem as insipid as Br'er Rabbit.

Some 425 boys and girls of all ages, some from broken homes, some by way of the juvenile courts, all with a background of trouble, have been taken into, for the most part, ordinary, middle-class families and given the chance for a purposeful, worthwhile life. Some have not made it, but an incredible number needed only that chance.

From the moment you begin to look into this story you marvel at the kind of people who will volunteer.

More often than not they'll be taking a child who is troubled, difficult, unhappy and insecure. Many of the teen-agers will carry the stigma of delinquent. There's no money to be made from it. Indeed, many foster parents are lucky to break even on a grant that, depending on the age of the child, varies from $50 to $75 a month for room and board and from $8 to $14 for clothing. If the relationship is an entire success, if the foster child becomes an intregal, accepted and loved part of the family, the end result may be the wrench when he returns to his natural parents.

These predictable headaches and heartaches have not daunted the heroic 327 families — and, talking to some of them, you find they look on their role more as a privilege than a duty — but they help to explain why a chronic shortage of volunteers has now become something of a crisis.

The whole foster parent philosophy has evolved over the last decade from the brief care of a child whose parents were sick or in distress to the present concept of a more permanent relationship. A child who has not returned to his natural parents in a year or 18 months is very likely to remain in his foster home until he goes out to make his own way in the world.

This more demanding function by the foster parent has been complicated in the last couple of years by a sharp increase in the number of young people needing substitute homes. Under the amendment to the Protection of Children Act the juvenile court may commit young people as wards of the Family and Children's Service. This means not merely an increase in numbers, but an increase in the kind of youngsters, branded as delinquents, who are always hardest to place.

There's been a corresponding increase, too, in the numbers of Indian children who need homes. It's a sobering, saddening thing to learn that in the past year 13 per cent of all children in need of foster homes were Indian, though the Indian population comprises about half of one per cent in the area under the agency's jurisdiction.

While there's a surplus of homes for infants, either as foster parents or for adoption, there are never enough families willing to take boys or girls over the age of 10, especially those with a court history.

Mrs. B. Levitz Packford, who has been active in this work as supervisor for the past 12 years and has not yet lost her sense of wonder at the selflessness of the foster parents, tells me that 35 homes are needed right now to have an adequate selection in matching children to a family environment that will be best for them.

She is the first to admit that it is a demanding, time-consuming job requiring endless patience and understanding. That it also offers deep rewards of satisfaction and accomplishment will be seen in a second report.

Ask the Times

Q. Would you please tell me why fish jump? C.L.

A. The Times' resident sport fishing expert Arthur Mayse suggests there are probably varied reasons for fish jumping, but nobody seems to know for sure. One theory, he says, is that fish, especially salmon, jump to dislodge tiny parasites called "sea lice" which live on their scales. Or they may jump for sheer fun. Another theory is that they may leap during a spawning run to loosen the strings of roe they will soon lay in some streambed. And, of course, fish jump to shake loose hooks and to get over barriers or away from predators.

Q. Whom should I contact to become a member of Golden Age?—D.L.H.

A. We're not sure what you mean, but Silver Threads Service, 4 Centennial Sq., Tel. 388-4268, should be able to help.

Police drive by but do not charge Chesterman's Beach campers who ignored this sign

Beach Camping Ban Surprises Tofino Mayor

Hugo Peterson, mayor of Tofino, said today he opposes a government order prohibiting camping on Chesterman's Beach, situated north of the Long Beach Pacific Rim National Park.

Signs banning squatting and any type of camping on all beaches situated on either side of the national park were posted at all accesses to the waterfront following passage last week of a provincial-government order-in council.

But most people seemed to have ignored the order over the Victoria Day weekend. There were at least 60 campsites at Chesterman's and many others at other beaches situated outside the park.

●

RCMP at Tofino said the matter is being discussed at higher levels.

It is estimated between 6,000 and 8,000 people visited Long Beach over the weekend.

Peterson said the government order was premature.

"It should not have been passed at this time — not until this area is organized to cope with and to service large crowds," he said. "We are not yet ready."

Peterson said residents are not opposed to legislation banning squatting.

"This was the original proposal," he said. "Then overnight we learned that weekend camping has also been prohibited."

He said he didn't know who was responsible for getting the government to pass the non-camping order.

●

Ernie Bach, a former president of the Tofino Chamber of Commerce, said last week, that Dr. H. R. McDiarmid, MLA for Alberni, attempted to persuade the regional district to pass a bylaw banning camping on beaches but the request was turned down.

McDiarmid is the owner of property overlooking Chesterman's Beach, a favorite camping spot and recreational area for Tofino residents.

At the present, plans call for a housing subdivision.

"I think a part of upland property should be commercial," he said. "This would include a camping site and services."

The Pacific Rim park is 16 miles long and this year provides campers with about four miles of beach frontage. Plans call for expansion of camping sites on property overlooking the beach.

To the north and south of the park there are also scores of beaches, one of the most popular being Chesterman's. Many residents would like this area incorporated into the park.

Bigger Drug Squad Wanted 'Before We Get Swamped'

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

The Victoria Police Commission today asked for a bigger effort from the RCMP to fight increasing traffic in drugs here.

Commission chairman Mayor Courtney Haddock said the city should try now to get an improved drug-fighting operation "before we get swamped."

The commission decided it would write to federal authorities and ask for an increased RCMP force in the Victoria area.

Haddock said there have been reports of increasing drug traffic that are "not very comforting."

Gregory said he shared Haddock's concern. There were "half a dozen" known hard drug addicts in Victoria five years ago, and today there are "at least 50," Gregory said.

Besides the RCMP drug squad, Victoria contributes one full-time policeman to the work, as do two other of the local forces, Gregory said.

Gregory added that "we are not unique in having this problem — it exists in nearly every city in North America today, if not the world."

Haddock called for more preventive action, but Gregory said this work is being done. "... the young will experiment," however. He said he would "certainly recommend" that the commission write a letter to the RCMP asking for more help.

Haddock also said he wants more police work in and around the Churchill Hotel, whose beer parlor exit lies near Bastion Square.

"The people (merchants) in Bastion Square are having a difficult time," Haddock said. "They come out of that place, and the next thing you know . . ."

Gregory said there is fighting around most of the city's beer parlors near closing time each night.

Haddock said "they can fight all they like" outside most beer parlors because it usually takes place in a parking lot.

"You can always do something about the licence," he suggested.

Gregory said he can report excessive trouble to the provincial liquor control board, which administers liquor selling licences.

But he said since the last major complaint about the Churchill — "since the fiasco with the 19-year-olds" last year — that hotel has improved the behavior of clientele.

Library Won't Air Budget

Details of the Greater Victoria Public Library's financial statements were refused reporters Tuesday by the board.

Chairman Col. A. O. Hood said "We are not trying to hide anything" but added that some details in the statements were still to be dealt with.

At its previous meeting, Hood had agreed to reporters having access to the information.

Library director Donald Miller said today the board's reluctance might be attributed to their being "sensitive to criticism from the municipalities" and that changes had been made to the budget after it had been set.

Police Rule Out Inside Job

Victoria police said today they do not believe that the weekend break-in at Woodward's Mayfair store was an inside job.

The break-in occurred sometime between 7 p.m. Saturday and 4 p.m. Monday. Merchandise estimated to be worth more than $30,000 was stolen.

This included about $15,000 worth of watches, $5,080 in cameras, film and binoculars and approximately $4,000 worth of perfume.

Three police investigators have been assigned to work on the case, Detective-Inspector Bill Andrews said today. Ferry and airport exit points on Vancouver Island are being checked, and Vancouver police have been notified.

This procedure is followed when the amount stolen is so large that it cannot be disposed of in the area.

The break-in was not discovered until late Monday afternoon when a store employee started work and had trouble entering the store with his key.

The thieves apparently climbed a wire fence which enclosed a display of camping equipment. From a tent next to a store window, the thieves cut out a piece of plate glass about 20 by 30 inches and entered the store.

Police reports said the thieves appeared to know the routine of the store's maintenance men who left the premises at 7 p.m. Saturday and did not return until 4 p.m. Monday. They also seemed to know the location of a portable cupboard behind a counter in which keys to shipping and receiving doors were kept.

ESCAPE ROUTE

A hasp had been knocked from the cupboard and padlocks were removed from the shipping and receiving doors. Lock mechanisms had been removed from a hardware department door and a door leading to the patio roof.

Sources said the two doors apparently had been prepared for use as escape routes. They would have been kept open during the robbery, then closed after the escape so pursuers could not follow.

The stolen goods were removed in suitcases also taken from the store. The thieves rounded up so many containers that not all were used. Some overnight bags were found left at the camera counter.

Department managers were called to the store Monday after the robbery was reported. They began the job of tabulating a list of stolen items.

Andrews said the list is not yet complete. One report said rings, brooches and other jewelry may have been taken. Drawers in the store's post office and drug departments had been jimmied with screwdrivers, but nothing was reported missing.

Begging Scheme Foiled

Two young men who devised what Judge William Ostler called an "ingenious" scheme to finance a summer trip were each fined $15 today when they pleaded guilty to begging door to door.

Gerald E. McDormand, 19, of 115, East Burnside, and Roy MacLaren, 25, of 181 Kuper, court was told, went from door to door on Pilot Street Tuesday evening asking occupants for a nickel.

They told homeowners that they were canvassing all residents in the city for nickels so they would have enough money to go on a trip.

Ostler told McDormand that everybody admires imagination but this technique of collecting money is against the law.

McDormand said he and friends had thought the plan up but he didn't realize it is against the law.

"You'll have to think of some other method," Ostler said.

Indian Festival Not Centennial

Chief Cy Baker of the coast Salish said Tuesday that the Indian people had not gathered at the Tsamis Festival at Macaulay Point to celebrate the B.C. centennial.

He feels that the centennial is "nothing to celebrate as far as his people are concerned. We are celebrating the revival of interest in our cultural heritage among our children," the chief said.

"Our children are interested in our culture now and want to learn of our people and the old ways. We are happy to show our culture as a means of establishing communications between whites and Indians."

Chief Baker does not believe his people can return to the old ways completely. "We must become used to the new ways and learn to use the material things that come with it," he said.

A FEW TIMES IN A year, the sea withdraws from our home cove until rocks that no normal ebb lays bare are drying in the sun. Even though the tide tables let us know when these extreme low tides are due, they never fail to surprise us. The distance between foreshore drift-logs and water's edge seems impossibly wide. The rock points have shortened, and familiar landmarks have changed shape.

One of these low-low tides was listed for Monday. What with grass to mow and the last of our bedding plants to be set out, we'd intended to ignore it. But the knowledge of an exceptional ebb under way kept nagging at us, and it occured to us that our dog was overdue for a run.

So we downed tools, and jogged off to the cove for what we assured each other would be the merest look-see.

What we chose to forget was that a low-tide beach creates its own time-zone — one in which such arbitrary human measurements as hours and minutes lose meaning.

We hunted up sticks of proper sturdiness for poking around among rocks, and ambled toward the north point with a pause to investigate a sea pool.

Its sand bottom lay exposed, and it looked to be utterly empty of life. But appearances can be deceiving. You never know what creatures may have been left trapped in such a pool to wait the return of the tide.

A school of shiners, perhaps, revealed by the flash of a golden side. Sometimes a flounder half-buried in the sand, with only twin eye-bumps to suggest the presence of a flatfish in protective camouflage. Often a cloud of baby sculpins no more than a thumbnail long.

We left him to stalk these elusive darters, which he hadn't a hope of catching, and strolled on to the weed-sheathed rocks under the point.

Those slithery stones are close-laid as scales on a fish. Bright green sea-lettuce clings to them. Among them lie torn shreds of red seaweed, rough as terry cloth, and kelp fronds ripped loose by the last blow. Some of the larger rocks are streaked with a dark-brown growth prized by Chinese beachcombers for seaweed soup.

Pry a stone loose, turn it over, and you find abundant life. Blennies which we miscall sand eels wiggle and flip. Tiny crabs scuttle with pincers at the ready.

There are tube worms and sea worms, and often the brilliant sausage-shape of a sea anenome which will spread flowerlike tentacles when the tide returns.

The tide, though, was still retreating.

We followed its edge along a widened reach of sand, under a sky that hinted of rain to come.

The gulls and the fish crows were busy. We found the remains of a rock crab larger than the little nippers under the stones, orange shell overturned and neatly hollowed, lesser claws scattered on the sand. Fresh clam shells told of other feastings.

A couple of hundred yards offshore, the cove's resident Pacific loon and a fleet of lesser divers were guzzling bait-fish.

They were effective fishermen. The ripples of a dive would flatten away. Presently the bird would reappear, bright silver gripped crosswise in its bill.

A shake and a flip to position the fingering head-on, then the feathered appetite gulped it down.

Lancer barked from the lee of the stony point. He had found big game in an eel-grass patch — a warrior crab six inches or more across its armored back, with formidable pincers waving defiance.

Dog extended a gingerly paw, only to snatch it back a split second before crab could administer punishment.

They dueled, crab steadily retreating, until Lancer was shoulder-deep. Then he too retreated from the profitless encounter.

By this time, the tide had turned, and the expected rain had begun to sift down upon sea, grey tidelands, and a pair of strayed gardeners with work neglected who had meant to spend minutes only.

Not hours, as a house clock that doesn't keep beachtime reminded us.

Royals' Appeal Upheld, Spartans Get Nod, Too

Victoria Royals and Vancouver Spartans have been given the go-ahead for their summer schedule in the Western Canada Soccer League.

The Canadian Soccer Association Tuesday announced that the appeals committee had over-ruled the B.C. Football Association commission on its refusal to grant affiliation to the Royals and Spartans.

There has been no announcement when the league schedule will commence. However, it is expected the first game will be played here by the Royals in about two weeks.

Coach Brian Hughes, who recently arrived from Wales for his second season as coach of the Royals, has been holding practices during the past three weeks.

Now that Victoria United has been eliminated from the Pacific Coast League playoffs, it is expected that several members of that club will turn out for the WCSL club.

League action began on Sunday with Edmonton Eagles defeating Winnipeg Blues, 3-1. Hamish Black, Brian Dowling and John Devlin scored for Edmonton and David Kerr replied for Winnipeg.

Canada Set to Return To International Play

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will be asked today to re-enter international competition below the national level and to approve a junior recommendation to set up a junior "super game" in Canada.

A Saskatchewan Amateur Hockey Association proposal that the CAHA review its policy on non-participation in international competition is expected to go before the association's plenary session today, the third day of the week-long annual meeting.

The proposal says the CAHA should "re-enter international competition in all divisions other than that concerning the national team."

The proposal says the national team is sponsored by, and is a responsibility of, Hockey Canada and the decision whether Canadian national teams re-enter international competition should be made by Hockey Canada.

WITHDREW IN 1970

Canada withdrew from all international competition in January, 1970, when the International Ice Hockey Federation reversed its decision to allow the Canadian team to use nine professionals.

At that time CAHA president Earl Dawson denounced the reversal and criticized the leadership of Bunny Ahearne, president of the IIHF. The CAHA stand was that there would be no international exchange of teams between Canada and Europe until Canada was allowed to use professionals in world championships.

Dawson confirmed Tuesday that Canada will not have a hockey entry in the 1972 Olympics in Sapporo, Japan. He said Canada would re-enter international competition at the national level only when open tournaments involving both amateurs and professionals are allowed.

Dawson said the general feeling of the CAHA appears to favor the Saskatchewan proposal and added: "I think we've made our point. I also think that if we send a team to play in Holland, which has invited a minor club to play there, people might get the point. . . . Holland supported us so we will play them."

The only other major issue expected to reach the floor today is the subject of junior hockey and its problems.

DEMANDS DISCUSSION

Dawson threw a recommendation to abolish the two-level system of junior hockey back into the lap of the junior congress and told them:

"I don't want to see this recommendation come before the plenary session until there has been more discussion."

The junior congress took the recommendation, and the president's words, back into their separate meeting and two hours later had a new one for the resolution committee.

That came from Jean Chretian of the Ottawa and District Hockey Association and calls for a one-game final between the winners of the Memorial Cup and the Centennial Cup. The Memorial Cup is presented to the Major Junior A champions of Canada while the Centennial Cup goes to the Junior A victors.

The British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association protested the planned expansion of the WCHL into the Vancouver area, claiming such a move would destroy the three junior hockey teams now in that area.

BCAHA president Milo Fabro said the WCHL plans to move its Estevan franchise to New Westminster, adding:

"If they do move it will put the New Westminster team in the B.C. Junior Hockey League out of business as well as the teams in Vancouver and Coquitlam."

The CAHA-WCHL agreement allows the western league to expand into any western city now without a level-one team, but Gil Lundihn of Vancouver said "their expansion is destroying us."

"If we don't get the support and protection from the CAHA we'll have to go to court," he said.

BILL WALKER

The holiday weekend in review, or now that Victoria United has fallen by the wayside, where exactly does that leave soccer's summer replacement, the Royals?

It was a truly unfortunate ending for United, that 1-0 loss to Croatia on Monday, especially as there had been such a fine beginning in the Pacific Coast Soccer League last fall.

At one time in mid season, coach Frank Grealy had his charges in fine shape, and on top of the league. United ran off a string of 14 games without defeat during their peak, and were considered a shoo-in for the league championship.

But all that bloom of greatness died on the vine in the spring, culminated by that bizarre touch on Moday. The only goal of the match came from the foot of one United player and rebounded off another into United's own net. Otherwise, there was hardly a decent scoring chance by the visitors, who played for the one goal to stand up. And it did.

If this ghastly windup was the final blow to United, it also was significant of the many frustrations that marked the final weeks of the season.

Nothing went right for the team. There were some player losses, followed by a costly slump from which the club never actually recovered. Then of course there was that continuing controversy with the league over officials. This had the team up tight, and did nothing for the players' morale either.

However, now it is interesting to ponder the thought: what happens to the Royals of the Western Canada Soccer League, now that the Canadian Soccer Association has upheld their protest at being denied affiliation by the B.C. Football Association Commission?

●

For after all, the Royals, are defending WCSL champions, and actually formed the nucleus of United. And vice versa. And any success that either club enjoyed must, of necessity, be shared by the other. This is only fair.

This is what makes it difficult to understand why the commission withheld affiliation to the Royals in the first place, and also to the Spartans in Vancouver.

It can only be construed as a move on the part of someone, or some group, to put the Royals and Spartans out of business. Because if these teams can't affiliate, they can't play. It's that simple.

But why?

Last year, the summer clubs, in their first venture, were a modest success. If the fans didn't exactly knock down the barriers to get to the games, the league drew more spectators on the average to their summer show than the PCSL did to theirs in the winter. This alone has to be a plus.

Jim Irvine of Ladysmith was the motivating force behind the Royals. It was his idea that evening football for all might entice the curiosity seekers as well as those who would come out of passion. It also was his plan to use as many youngsters as could be accomodated to improve the calibre, if not the image, of football. It again was his aim to give the players, and others, the opportunity of excellent coaching.

Needless to say, it was a financial gamble, and no money-maker either: But at least Irvine succeeded where he said he would.

This year he has brought back Brian Hughes as coach, and actually installed him here for a full year for all of football to use.

Spartans, meanwhile, may have gone Jim one better, in their bid to boost football on the mainland.

Under former Victorian John Pickburn, who is managing the club, they have engaged England's Peter Dinsdale as coach, and recruited a number of Canadians who have been playing in England as members of the club. These players are allowed to play here under special permit. This is what can be referred to as "class".

In short, here are two prime examples of initiative and promotion. This has resulted, and should result again, in a gate attraction designed to sell, and even more important, bring a new excitement to a sport that most certainly can use it.

Anything of this nature can't help but raise the level of the game. Which is the idea, isn't it? And few will dare deny that last year's trend by the Royals was reflected in United's fast start in the Coast League in the fall. Besides there were several high school players who got their first big chance in the summer, and now have earned their spurs.

So why sit back and wait for a whole new generation of soccer players to grow up? Why not help them along to the top.? That was the idea here, in the beginning. And it worked.

So why knock success? It just doesn't make sense.

It's Juan Cake They Can't Cut

By The Associated Press

Los Angeles Dodgers helped Willie Mays celebrate his 20 years in the big leagues with a barrage of birthday cakes—but they couldn't cut it against Juan Marichal — as usual.

Mays was rewarded with 20 cakes before the San Francisco-Los Angeles contest Tuesday night at Dodger Stadium, then Marichal went out and starved the Dodgers on seven hits in a 9-1 Giants romp.

The triumph continued Marichal's spellbinding successes against his Los Angeles cousins. He now has mastered them 36 times in 49 career decisions.

Marichal, who has a history of pitching his best against the Doger aces, beat Bill Singer for the second time in two weeks.

Singer, blasted out by a six-run sixth inning that included a three-run homer by Marichal, is off to the worst start of his career with a 2-9 record.

Elsewhere in the National League, New York Mets trimmed Philadelphia Phillies 5-4 in 12 innings; Houston Astros stopped San Diego Padres 3-2; Montreal Expos edged Atlanta Braves 3-2; St. Louis Cardinals bounced Chicago Cubs 4-2 and Cincinnati Reds turned back Pittsburgh Pirates 7-4.

Ron Swoboda's bases-loaded walk in the seventh inning scored the winning run for Montreal. Swoboda's walk off Phil Niekro followed passes to Rusty Staub and Bob Bailey and an error by second baseman Felix Millan on Ron Fairly's sharp grounder.

The Expos had tied the game 2-2 on Fairly's run-scoring single in the fifth.

FOY SPARKLES

In the American League, Joe Foy lashed out four hits and singled home the winning run in the 11th inning to give Washington Senators a 6-5 triumph over Boston Red Sox, his former team.

It was Washington's second victory in a row over the Red Sox, with Foy collecting seven hits in nine at-bats and raising his average from .204 to .246. He's batting .571 against the Red Sox this season.

In other American League action, Oakland Athletics beat Calinornia Angels 7-5 in 13 innings, Detroit Tigers whipped New York Yankees 7-4, Minnesota Twins downed Milwaukee Brewers 8-5 and Kansas City Royals trounced Chicago White Sox 8-3. Cleveland was rained out at Baltimore with Orioles leading 2-1 in the second inning.

SABRES READY TO RAISE ROOF

BUFFALO, N.Y., (CP) — The roof of Buffalo's War Memorial Auditorium, home of the National Hockey League Buffalo Sabres, is being raised 24 feet to accommodate 4,800 extra seats.

Work on the roof was to start today, launching a project to increase seating capacity to 15,200.

The roof-raising program is part of a $9 million renovation and enlargement project due to be completed in August.

Higuchi Taking Shot at Kiniski

Hawaiian strongman Dean Higuchi takes a shot at Gene Kiniski and the Pacific coast championship Saturday, May 29, in the main event of a professional wrestling card at Memorial Arena.

In a tag-team match, two bruisers from Detroit called the Skull Brothers make their Victoria debuts against speedy Eric Froelich and veteran Roy McClarty. Two other matches starting at 8 p.m., will complete the program.

Irish Bid for Lead With Burrards Here

The Victoria Shamrocks will be shooting for a share of first place in the Western Lacrosse Association when they host Vancouver Burrards at Memorial Arena tonight.

However, the chore may not be that simple, because Burrards Tuesday night showed they have designs on second place, which could come for them with a win here.

Burrards defeated the Shamrocks, 11-9, at Kerrisdale for their second win of the young season and a vistory here would tie them with Shamrocks and Coquitlam. New Westminster leads with eight points.

TIED FIVE TIMES

Actually, the game could have gone either way. It was tied up no less than five times and only a bad second period worked against the Shamrocks.

Vancouver scored six goals in the middle period to two for the Shamrocks resulting in a 10-6 lead, and although they outscored Burrards in the final period, the margin was too much to overcome.

Brent Atkins and Mile Beaulac had two goals each for Victoria. Frank and Ken Alexander, Muzz Bryant, Charn Dhillon and Tom Somner tallied once each in a losing cause.

WILSON SIGNED

During Tuesday's game the Burrard's executive announced the signing of Vancouver Canuck goaltender Dunc Wilson to a contract for the rest of the season.

He is expected to play for Vancouver next week, probably as a forward.

Canadiens Busiest Traders

(Times News Services)

Sam Pollock, general manager of Montreal Canadiens, was a busy man Tuesday as his National Hockey League club completed five player deals — two with Minnesota North Stars.

In an early deal, the Canadiens sent defenceman Bob Paradise and left winger Gary Gambucci to the North Stars to complete a year-old trade. Later, they exchanged defencemen with their Stanley cup semi-final opponents, sending Bob Murdoch to Minnesota in exchange for Marshall Johnston.

The Canadiens also sent defenceman Greg Boddy to Vancouver Canucks for cash and the Canucks' third-round draft choice in the NHO's annual draft of amateur players.

Then they sold centre Bobby Sheehan to California Golden Seals and traded veteran winger Leon Rochefort to Detroit Red Wings for defenceman Kerry Ketter.

New York Rangers dealt minor league goalie Peter McDuffe to St. Louis Blues for a future draft choice.

Farmers Pounce On Gorge Miscues

A string of costly errors by Gorge Hotel Tuesday in the second inning of a Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Royal Athletic Park paved the way for Farmer Construction's 3-0 victory.

Farmers jumped off to a 2-0 lead without a hit in the second as pitcher George Brice dropped a fly ball, Dave Rivers committed a three-base throwing error and a passed ball skipped by the catcher.

Farmers managed only three hits off Brice, who recently had been chosen to play on the Canadian Pan-American Games team.

Gord Strongman and John McKeachie singled in the sixth inning before Mark Perkins' error led to the third Farmer run. The only other hit off Brice was a single by Craig Lawrence in the third.

BOYER FEUDS . . . . . WITH BRAVES' BOSS

How Sweet They Are . . .

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — An angry Paul Richards, general manager of Atlanta Braves, declared Tuesday that Braves' third baseman Clete Boyer is a "lousy player" who can get his release from the club immediately if he wants it," The Atlanta Constitution says.

Jesse Outlar, sports editor of the newspaper, quotes Richards as saying: "For such a lousy player Boyer does a lot of talking. I'll give him his release today if he'll write out a cheque for 60 days' pay."

Outlar also reported that Richards informed Boyer of his feelings in a telephone call to Montreal, here the Braves are playing.

The outburst was said to have been prompted by an interview Boyer gave to a New York Post writer in which he was quoted as saying: "There shouldn't be any place for a guy like Richards in baseball."

Outlar said he telephoned Boyer and the slick-fielding infielder told him he had not been misquoted.

The New York story also quotes Boyer as saying that the Braves were petty in their dealings with players and that Luman Harris would not be managing the club except that he is "one of Richards' pals.'

Boyer's status with the Braves appeared to remain unsettled. Richards' comments indicated that he would not release the third baseman unless Boyer agrees to forfeit his 60 days severance pay.

Outlar quoted Boyer as saying: "Sure, I'll take my release. I suppose I'll forfeit the 60 days pay. I'm sure I can sign with some other club."

TEE TOPICS

By Ernie Fedoruk

To appreciate the family humor that surrounded Sunday's Times Vancouver Island Open final, you'll have to get acquainted with the backgrounds of Reg Clarkson and Bill Wakeham.

The friendly relationship formed back in the '30s when Reg's parents and Bill's grandparents were neighbors.

Mrs. Olive Wakeham made it known she was somewhat disturbed by the fact grandson Bill was to play Reg in the 1971 final. At 84, the matriarch of the Wakeham clan called Frank, Bill's father, on the carpet.

"They have no business playing each other," she declared before Sunday's final. "After all, we're friends."

They played off, as scheduled.

Wakeham won, as expected, but Clarkson proved to be a difficult adversary. All of which should please "grandma" when the word gets back to her.

★ ★ ★

Bill Goldsworthy and his cohorts at Cedar Hill are feeling elated, and for a good reason. Their 36-hole open tournament will be played Saturday and Sunday and a class field is assured.

When Dick Munn phoned in his entry from Point Grey on Tuesday, he became the 30th pro in the field. More to come. Even now, however, it looks like the finest lineup of pros to hit Victoria since the B.C. Open was played at Uplands a few years ago.

One foursome that is certain to attract a huge gallery will consist of Wakeham, Cedar Hill assistant Jim Girard (the defending champion), Bob Cox of Vancouver and Vancouver Canucks' Dave Tallon, the 1969 Canadian junior king.

Between them, Cox and Wakeham have won nine provincial opens.

The event is one of eight tournaments that make up the 1971 "B.C. Centennial Golf Tour," sponsored by Carling Breweries. The sponsorship has enabled Cedar Hill to offer $1,700 in prize money for the pros, and that's the kind of honey the golfing bees like best.

Meanwhile, another brewery has stepped into golf in a different manner.

Molsons will donate funds to send a crippled child to camp for one week for every hole-in-one scored in the province up to Sept. 30.

Uplands' Keith Burrell became the first B.C. golfer to "send" a youngster to camp when he fired an ace in the Inter-Club League matches last week.

Golfers scoring the aces get a suitably-inscribed scroll. The major stipulations are that the course must be affiliated with the B.C.G.A., and that the golfer must score his or her hole-in-one while playing a full 18 holes in a threesome or foursome.

SHORT CHIPS: Two other Victoria golfers marked up aces at the weekend . . . Walt Latoski, playing in a threesome with Bonar Law and C. Ritchie, counted his first on the 10th at Gorge Vale . . . Cedar Hill's Brian Gandy scored the second of his young career, holing out on the sixth while playing with Gord Rands and Jim Tarbuck . . . Laurie Kerr had to go two extra holes to defeat Bruce Pellmore and win the Colwood club handicap championship Sunday . . . Kerr won the 20th with a par . . . Bob Beauchemin won Gorge Vale's junior championship Saturday with a two-under-par 70 . . . The 17-year-old southpaw had his sights on a 68 but bogeyed two of the last three holes. . . .

District Committee officials are looking for a record entry for the City Junior tournament Saturday at Oak Bay), but the flow of entries for the City Amateur (June 5 and 6) is disappointing . . . Victoria juniors dominated the mid-Island tournament at Nanaimo . . . Gorge Vale's Gary Ferguson won the event, going five extra holes to defeat Wayne O'Malley of Cedar Hill and Sid Murdoch of Colwood in a playoff . . . The three tied for first after carding three-over-par 75s . . . Cedar Hill Bruce Rands was a stroke off the pace with a 76 . . . The B.C. PGA tournament opens today at Point Grey . . . Busy Busfield Meet Standout

Victoria Olympians' Scott Busfield was star performer at the Victoria Day challenge swimming meet at Crystal Gardens but his five wins weren't enough to stop visiting clubs from Port Angeles and Port Alberni.

Thanks primarily to relay event victories, Port Angeles Swim Club and Port Alberni Aquatic Club eked out an 814-801 win over host Victoria Olympians and Juan de Fuca Cohoes.

Busfield won all five events in the 11-12 boys' age group but the visitors swept all 16 relay events.

Top individual team was Port Angeles with 471 points, followed by the Olympians, 410, Cohoes, 391, and Port Alberni, 343.

Jenny Millo of Port Angeles won four events in the 10-and-under competition and was top girl at the meet.

Runs Not Scarce In Womens Play

Big one-sided scores continued to be the story in Women's Softball League play Tuesday as Esquimalt Junior Combos nailed Independents, 22-8, and Cablevision Juniors whitewashed Canadian Forces Roadrunners 24-0.

The competition was a little closer at Beacon Hill Park where Moose Lodge tried hard, but lost to Tillicum Athletic Club, 12-8.

TRADED by New York Rangers to Minnesota North Stars was National Hockey League veteran winger Bob Nevin (above). Stars, completing third deal in four days just minutes before Tuesday midnight deadline, will give up future draft choice in return for 33-year-old Nevin.

Hett's Four-Hitter Topples Seaboard

Pitcher Geoff Hett strung out four hits and struck out nine batters Tuesday in a Victoria Major Men's League game at Central Park in a Victoria Major Men's League game at Central Park to lead last-place Strathcona Hotel to a 3-0 victory over Seaboard Construction.

It was Strathcona's first victory over Seaboard in league play.

Hett preserved his shutout by working out of a bases-loaded, one-out situation in the sixth and aided his own cause by singling in a run in the second.

Derek Stone singled in an additional run in the second inning and Glen Kilduff's second straight double in the third completed the scoring.

Rozelle Hoping Talks Will Prevent Grid War

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle, trying to avoid an open conflict between his national Football League and the Canadian Football League, plans to take the Greg Barton case to the CFL for discussion.

"We have compiled the information on the case and we plan to talk to the CFL," he said Tuesday after a meeting of NFL owners. "I don't know what the chances are of getting Barton back until I talk to them."

Rozelle is trying to put out a spark that has raised talk of war between the leagues. The spark is Barton, an obscure quarterback with Detroit Lions who suddenly became a cause celebre when he was traded to Philadelphia Eagles, apparently agreed to sign with the Eagles and then was spirited away by Toronto Argonauts of the CFL.

ORAL AGREEMENT

"If we do have any evidence that Toronto tampered by talking to Barton before he played out his option we would prefer to give it to them (the CFL) first," Rozelle said. "We have no contractual agreement with the CFL, only an oral agreement against tampering, but both sides would prefer to avoid a bad situation.

"If we have evidence, I would hope that they (the CFL) would abide by it."

Jake Gaudaur, CFL commissioner, said Tuesday he has not yet received any formal complaint from Rozelle.

Meanwhile, coach Jerry Williams of the Eagles, hard-pressed for a quarterback after trading Norm Snead the same week he thought he had acquired Barton, talked about a possible war between the leagues.

"I can foresee a war as far as tampering is concerned," Williams said. "I don't think it would concern players jumping contracts, but I can see us going up there and talking players into playing out their options."

Barton, who threw only one pass in his three years with Detroit as a third-string quarterback, played out his option last season and became a free agent May 1. The Eagles thought they had reached an agreement with him before that date, only to turn around and find him gone to Toronto the first week in May.

He was not the first player lured away from the NFL by the Argonauts. Not only did they pay Barton in excess of the $100,000 to $150,000 reported to have been offered him by the Eagles, they also signed all-Americans Joe Theismann and Jim Stillwagon, draft picks of Miami Dolphins and Green Bay Packers, respectively, and highly regarded running back Leon McQuay of Tampa, who had another year of college eligibility remaining.

Barton's loss to the Eagles leaves them with three quarterbacks—Pete Liske, Rick Arrington and Wayne Liddick.

Vancouver Organist Guest For St. John's Recital

Guest recitalist tonight in the weekly series at St. John's Anglican Church is Vancouver organist John Mitchell.

With him on the program will be a string quartet consisting of Robert Winquist, first violin, Rod Booth, second, Elizabeth Bredberg, viola, and Bruce Turkington, cello.

The group will play Mozart's "Hunt" Quartet (K 458).

Mitchell was assistant at West Vancouver United Church for three years and at present is organist and choir master at Holy Trinity Church as well as assistant organist at St. John's, Shaughnessey.

He has given numerous recitals in Vancouver, at the cathedral and in various other churches and has been a recitalist at Christ Church Cathedral in Victoria.

Tonight's concert will begin at 7:30.

Mostel—From Harlem Tailor To Montreal Junk Dealer

By A. H. WEILER

NEW YORK (NYT) — Zero Mostel, a Harlem tailor in Jan Kadar's "The Angel Levine," will be a Canadian junk dealer in the Czech director's second English-language film, "The Lies My Father Told Me." Based on an original screenplay by Ted Allan, the comedy-drama will get under way for producer Harry Gulkin in Montreal next September.

So what's the deal with the junk dealer? "He is a Tevye-like character whose son is a strict realist, a man with no poetic feelings," Kadar said the other day. "But Mostel insists on creating for his grandson a world of imagination — by telling him wonderful stores and sharing experiences with him. He realizes that the best heritage he can leave the youngster is a wonderful childhood. . . ."

★ ★ ★

A man who hates homosexuals — and therefore feels compelled to dash about town murdering them — is the central character of "Cruising," a movie to be based on Gerald Walker's novel, which was published last year by Stein and Day, Walker, a New York Times editor, has been signed by producers Phil D'Antoni and Robert Weiner to write the screenplay. Shooting should begin here this fall.

"What my book does is tell gay guys what straight guys have against them," says Walker. "And it tells the straight guys why they're anti-gay."

The younger generation, of course, is very big on Bogart. Some of them are so hung up on him, in fact, that they want to make "Bogart movies." Michael S. Loughlin, a 31-year-old producer, writer John Sacret Young and director Paul Magwood, both 26, are now in the process of making "Open Shadow," which Loughlin promises will be a film in the tough Bogart tradition, though "not an imitation. It will be as authentic as we can make it . . . We'll even juxtapose scenes from movies of the forties with our modern images."

Warren Oates will play a hardboiled private eye determined to get to the bottom of a mystery involving a French beauty, to be played by Mrs. Loughlin, better known as Leslie Caron.

★ ★ ★

George C. Scott, who won on Oscar — like it or not — for his performance as "Patton," may be busted from general to major. Carter De Haven, producer of Scott's recently completed film, "The Last Run," says that he discussed with Scott the possibility of playing Maj. Robert Rogers in a new version of Kenneth Roberts's "Northwest Passage." And, according to De Haven, Scott is eager to sink his teeth into the role of the pre-revolutionary soldier-advenurer. And it'll be just his rotten luck to get another Oscar for it.

AFTER FORTY YEARS

Messer Takes Final Tour

Forty years of coast-to-coast live entertainment tours will end for Don Messer and his Islanders this month as they cross Canada for the last time, visiting large and small towns along the way.

RADIO SHOW

Don Messer's Jubilee began as a family radio show back in the third decade of this century and it is still a family show whose popularity has grown and flourished steadily with the years.

His particular brand of rhythm and sentiment has come to be regarded as a Canadian institution. Undoubtedly the most unpopular decision the Canadian Boradcasting Corporation has ever made was the cancellation of the show as a network feature.

The tour will end with the group back in Hamilton, Ont., for the recording of next season's shows at CHCH Television studio.

Tickets for the Don Messer Show, which is being sponsored by the City of Victoria, are now on sale at the Arena.

RAPE CHARGE LAID

Bolestaw Leszczynsk a stoker mechanic aboard the Swedish ship Tenos, pleaded innocent in court today to the rape charge and two other counts of indecent acts against the swimmer.

Police Sgt. Ray King said the defendant introduced himself to Mrs. Ware, 33, as a ship's captain at a Sydney hotel on Saturday. He said Leszczynsk took Miss Fraser and another man to his cabin on the Tenos.

King said Leszczynsk locked the cabin door when Mrs. Ware's companion was out of the room, produced a knife and forced her to remove her clothes.

Mrs. Ware said the seaman had forcible sexual intercourse with her.

NO RENT, NO PHONE, NO BILLS

'I Was Born to Live'

VANCOUVER (CP) — For three years, Bill Tomlin has lived in a squatter's shack, a crude but functional two-room shanty sitting directly beneath the new Georgia viaduct in the heart of the city.

He doesn't pay rent. There are no electricity bills because there is no electricity. He hasn't a stove, and there's no running water — not even an address.

But for the 64-year-old Mr. Tomlin, his shanty represents freedom.

"I wasn't born to make money," he says. "I was born to live."

"Many people ask me how I live. I live better than Czar Nicholas of Russia."

He has a small two-wheeled cart which he used to gather scraps of metal, wood,empty bottles and other discarded items, which he sells to salvage yards in the area.

"The tin on the roof cost me $24. I just got a new mattress and it cost me 120 empty wine bottles."

Inside his home, he has a crude fireplace for heating and cooking, a couple of chairs for his guests, and, on the wall, a color snapshot of his two grandchildren, of whom he is extremely proud.

The walls of his shack are papered with pages of old magazines.

HE LIKES HIPPIES

Nearly half of the living room is taken up by the fireplace, a raised stone platform with two sides and a chimney at the back. A table is built into a corner.

Bill believes in God, likes hippies and reads Vancouver's underground newspaper, the Georgia Straight. He is well read in the English and Russian literary classics, but the only American writer he is fond of is Jack London.

He gets his water from a nearby garage and carries it home in five-gallon cans. He used to get oil from the police station garage for a makeshift oil heater, but "lately I use wood because oil stinks."

He gets $89 a month welfare to supplement what he makes selling scrap, but says he could get by on about $30 a month if he had to.

"I even have a little money put away in the bank — not much mind you."

He was married once, with three children and a nice home, but he separated from his wife 18 years ago and two years later decided he wasn't going to work again — and he hasn't.

Drugs Kill Musician

TORONTO (CP) — City musicians turned out in force Tuesday to attend the funeral of 27-year-old Ronald Park, regarded by many of them as one of Canada's best tenor saxophone players.

Park was found dead of an overdose of heroin last week.

The saxophonist came to Toronto from Edmonton nine years ago and had played with bands in local night clubs and New York. In 1969 he sat in with the Don Thompson group on some CBC International Service recordings.

Close friends said they were shocked by his death. Only a few knew Park took drugs.

"He told me he had this (drug) problem when he came back from the States last fall," Mr. Erlendson said. "But he said he was going to kick it, because he had to. . . . He understood what would happen if he didn't."

ALBIA, Iowa — A farmer and his wife watched Tuesday while 35 acres of their land was auctioned off to satisfy a court judgment won by an alleged burglar after he was injured by a "burglar trap" set up on the couple's farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Briney, who have been involved in a court battle since the incident four years ago, saw their land sold to settle the claim of Marvin Katko, 31, who was wounded by a spring gun rigged in a vacant farmhouse. He was fined $50 for larceny in the night after he admitted trespassing.

He then sued for $30,000 damage as a result of his wounds.

UNIONVILLE, Ont. — An Oakville-area farmer has spent $65,000 for one cow. Claude Picket paid that Monday for a three-year-old Holstein cow called Romandale Reflection Cristy at an auction at Romandale Farms, north of Toronto.

The Guiness Book of World Records says the record price for a cow was set in 1968 when E. L. Vosley of Lepeer, Mich., paid $62,000 for a Holstein cow at Oak Ridges, Ont.

The premier was somewhat stiff and embarrassed at first but soon got the feel of the toin-toms and danced while 400 delegates to the meeting grinned their approval.

LONDON — Lord Thomson has given up the idea of retiring. "Never," he said jovially when asked when he might step down from the duties of office.

The Canadian-born international publisher, who will be 77 June 5, is joint chairman of the Thomson Organization Ltd., which controls newspapers, magazines and book publications as well as holiday travel and air-charter operations.

Angry Coroner Charges Retarded Man Maltreated

OTTAWA (CP) — An angry city coroner says a mentally retarded man worked long hours on an area farm on a diet of "enormous amounts of macaroni and ketchup supplemented by such nutrients as calf starter and ensilage."

Dr. Roger Hughes was giving further information Tuesday on an investigation he launched into the case of the 25-year-old man who crippled himself after shovelling snow on the farm at nearby Richmond in below-zero weather. The man now is suffering gangrene in both hands.

Crown Attorney John Cassels said he has received reports from Dr. Hughes and from the police and the matter will be further investigated before any charges are considered.

Dr. Hughes said his investigation disclosed:

—The retarded man ran away because of maltreatment by the farmer and was later reported to be suffering from malnutrition.

—He worked 12 to 15 hours a day on a diet that consisted mainly of macaroni and ketchup supplemented by such nutrients as calf starter and ensilage.

—He had to wash in an unheated garage and was not allowed in the farmhouse except when he was locked in his room at night.

—His ears, nose and fingers were frozen as the result of being locked outside at 2 a.m. in winter to shovel the driveway. He was wearing only light clothing.

The administrator of the Rideau Regional Hospital in Smiths Falls, said the man had been there for six years before being discharged in 1968. Dr. Hughes says the man was being supervised by a social worker from the hospital at the time, although he technically may not have been a patient.

Prices Effective May 26, 27, 28, 29.

Fishermen Shy Of Trouble Spot

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jack Secord says he will stay clear of the spot south of Cape Chacon, B.C., where he had a running and talking duel May 16 with the United States Coast Guard cutter Cape Romain.

But, he said in an interview Monday at his home in suburban Surrey, the reason he is not going back is because he doesn't think the fishing is good there now.

"If I thought it was worth it I would be back—with a Canadian government escort," he said.

Secord's 57-foot Anthony J. was approached by the Cape Romain and ordered to an Alaska port. Instead, the Anthony J. headed for Prince Rupert, B.C., with the coast guard cutter in pursuit.

Secord said that when the Cape Romain uncovered its guns and threatened to shoot across the bow of the fishboat, a crew member on the Anthony J. called across to the U.S. gunners: "Don't be another Lieutenant Calley."

He said the coast guard did not seem to realize he was fishing only half a mile off Nunez Rock which is listed as being Canadian territory. Therefore, he was being chased out of Canadian territorial waters, he said.

He said it seemed childish to be threatening to shoot in an argument about a couple of square miles of water, but it was a reflection of the increasingly tough attitude the U.S. was taking towards Canadian vessels fishing in the area.

Meanwhile, he said the incident has probably cost him about $5,500. Damaged fishing gear would cost about $500 to repair and Secord estimated the fish he didn't catch because of the incident would have been worth $5,000.

The fisheries department vessel G. B. Reed Friday recovered $2,000 worth of halibut fishing gear abandoned by the Anthony J.

INFLATABLES FALL FLAT

Victorians Take to Water Beds Like Ducks

By ELIZABETH BENNETT

Air-filled furniture seems to have hit an air pocket in the Victoria market, but water beds are riding a wave of success.

Both offer comfort and convenience come moving time, but inflatable tables and chairs may not be durable enough to stand up to daily wear and tear.

"If they were impoved to meet the standards of durability required by adults, I think they would go over very well," said a salesman of a local department store.

He said his department had carried light weight vinyl chairs but had discontinued after a few were returned.

"When it comes to comfort, I don't think standard furniture can beat inflatables," said Ron Wright, a water bed dealer, who has a few inflatable chairs in his shop.

"The trouble is, if you get a cigarette burn on a seam, you can't patch it with a kit. We found a way to fix them, but it isn't at all neat looking."

Another problem for inflatables in Victoria is the supply.

One furniture store had a good selection of chairs, hassocks and chesterfields at Christmas, ranging from $7 to $40. The products were of heavy, durable vinyl and were very popular.

Now they have only a limited selection of chairs in very few colors, and their supplier is in the same position. Despite inquiries from customers, they don't plan to order more.

Water beds, on the other hand, are doing very well.

Within the past two months, three stores dealing exclusively in water beds have opened in Victoria.

The quality is high, perhaps because the consequences of a split seam are so devastating.

Where several qualities of vinyl are used for inflatable chairs, water bed manufacturers all use heavy duty vinyl and vie with each other to produce the strongest possible seams. Double locking valves are used that resist pressure.

As extra insurance against water damage (regular insurance against water damage is difficult for water bed owners to obtain), manufacturers and salesmen suggest a vinyl lined frame that will catch any water that leaks out.

As well, the frame supports the sides of the mattress, containing the wave action and keeping undue stress off the seams. A water bed on the floor will also be weakened by the continual rub of dirt carried along by the wave action.

The salesmen claim a properly framed water bed is completely safe for normal use. Manufacturer guarantees go as high as five years.

Smoking, and even pets, are not major problems as the mattress itself is protected by a one inch foam pad and the bed clothes.

All ordinary bedding, except fitted sheets can be used on a water bed, and the pressure of the water against the frame holds sheets and blankets in place.

Water bed afficionados also claim that the sleeper stops tossing, turning, and rumpling the bed clothes because the water adjusts under his weight supporting every part of his body and eliminating uncomfortable pressure.

It is this support that leads to the claim that water beds are good for those suffering from back muscle and joint pain. One owner says he originally bought a water bed because of his back and became such a firm convert that he opened a shop so water beds would be avaiable to everyone.

"I'd like to put a water bed into every home for two nights free of charge," said one water-bed entrepreneur. "It takes that long to get really used to one, but I don't think we'd have any returns."

As it is most people buy water beds because they are fun.

The foam pads, cut to fit, are about $10 each. These insulate the sleeper against the temperature of the water, which at room temperature can still draw heat from a 98.6 degree body, and any condensation that might collect on the vinyl bag.

A liner costs about $3, and a basic frame can be made for as little as $20. The stores offer leaflets telling how to make a frame and what dimensions to use. They also make frames, which vary in price depdending on the trim and headboard.

The price of a complete unit varies between $100 and $160 — considerably less than a new box spring and mattress.

The firmness can be varied by the amount of water added. Filled, a king size bed weights somewhere around 1,600 pounds. This seems like a lot, but pianos and large appliances weigh about the same and a water bed spreads the weight over a larger area.

"If you wonder if your floor can take it, get 10, or better yet 12, friends to stand where the bed will be. If the floor doesn't sag you can get a water bed," one salesman suggests.

Once filled, a water bed can stay where it is until it is time to move. Then the water can be siphoned or pumped out and the vinyl bag folded into an easily packable bundle. The frames are made to come apart for moving.

Home Recipe Plan Takes Off Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

And what it means to you.

1. Things like schools, roads and community grants.

The statistics we get from the Census are used in planning the building and location of things like schools, hospitals and roads. Many government grants and assistance programs are allocated on a per capita basis and the Census statistics are used for these. So for every person who does not get counted the community loses.

A major national Census only happens once every ten years. That's why it is so important that you take advantage of this one on June 1.

2. A lot of little circles to fill in.

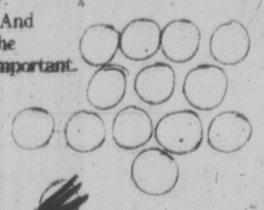
You can have a little fun filling in your Census form. But please fill in the circles carefully. With a pencil. And remember all the questions are important.



Right Wrong

3. Privacy.

The Census questionnaire must be completed by law and your privacy is ensured by law. It's all part of our Statistics Act.

And, on our part we ensure that all the information you give will be kept completely confidential. It's top secret stuff. Really. To be used only to produce statistics.

No one outside DBS, not even another government department, can get near the individual census forms. Only compiled statistics will be made available.

There are severe legal penalties for any DBS employee who doesn't respect your privacy.

4. It's your country.

Census results will affect your community, your province and your country.

By completing your census form on June 1, you'll be participating in the planning for a better Canada.

5. It wouldn't be right without you.

Everyone in Canada must be counted in a National Census. That makes sense. What good would a National Census be if only the rich people were questioned? Or only the poor people? Or only the city people? It has to be everyone.

So, count yourself in to the better Canada.

That's what Census '71 means to you.

June 1 is Census Day.
Count yourself in.

STIGMA FADING

Boys Enrol at Ballet School

TORONTO (CP) — The stigma of being a male ballet dancer is rapidly fading, says Betty Oliphant, National Ballet School director and principal.

In an interview, Miss Oliphant said she finds North American fathers particularly respectful of their son's career wishes.

Though the NBS had no boy students when it opened in 1959 there are now 22 and between 30 and 40 boys are expected to be enrolled next year. There are 96 girls enrolled.

The school, which provides full-time academic and dance instruction, starts at Grade 5.

"Sometimes we get pretty depressed because there's so much expected of you here," he said.

But a large part of the day is devoted to dancing and "that's the best part," according to 14-year-old Aaron Shields of Vancouver.

Both boys are in Grade 8 and, like the girls, are kept busy from 7:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Despite the busy schedule the pupils are enthusiastic.

Luc Amyot, 13, of Quebec City summed it up: "None of us really knows why we love it so — we just do."

SISSY STIGMA long associated with male ballet dancers is fading rapidly says Betty Oliphant, director and principal of the National Ballet School in Toronto. The school has 22 boys and 96 girls enrolled as full-time students. From the top are five of the boys: Paul LeForestier, age 15, of Toronto; Luc Amyot, age 13, of Quebec City; Raymond Smith, age 14, of London, Ont.; Peter Ottman, age 14, of Port Credit, Ont.; Aaron Shields, age 14, of Vancouver, B.C.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

DEAR ABBY . . .

Wrong Route

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am an airline stewardess, 30 years old, and happily married. I am a very friendly person, but I don't think I am overly friendly. I have been eating with my group at a certain airport restaurant which is very conveniently located and has good food at sensible prices.

During the last few months I noticed a bus boy (not young) being very attentive to me. The others in my group noticed it, too, because they mentioned it. I say hello and smile at all the people who work there, the waitresses, cashier, etc., and bus boys, too, but I never gave this one bus boy any reason to get the wrong idea.

Last week, just as I was leaving, this bus boy ran up to me and handed me a letter. I opened it and it was a love letter, declaring he was "in love" with me, and my eyes told him that I loved him, too!

I haven't been back there since. It's the best restaurant in the airport, but I'm scared to go back. I don't want to get him fired, Abby. How should I handle this?—Puzzled Stewardess

DEAR STEWARDESS: Go back, and pointedly ignore the bus boy. He will get the message. If he makes any more overtures, report him to the manager.

DEAR ABBY: My mother is violently opposed to drinking. My husband and I keep beer in our refrigerator as we enjoy it occasionally, and so do some of our friends, but we certainly don't overdo it.

My husband agreed not to drink in front of my mother. The problem is that my mother refuses to come to our house if beer is even in the refrigerator. My husband told me that my mother doesn't have the right to dictate the contents of our refrigerator, and his agreeing not to drink in front of her is as far as he will go. My husband has already taken a lot from my mother, and I'm not sure if I have the right to ask him to back down on this point. So who should be told what?—Nameless Please

DEAR NAMELESS: Your mother should be told that you keep beer in your refrigerator, so if she chooses not to visit you for that reason, you will miss her visit.

DEAR ABBY: My wife is a substitute teacher. She told me that when the principal telephones her to come to work, he always ends his conversation with, "See you later, baby!" (Or "sweetie," or "darling.")

The principal is about 35 years old and my wife is 37 and very attractive. She says she is sure the principal means nothing by it, and she's probably right, but we have a 15-year-old son who has a phone in his room, and if he were to accidentally hear this it would be difficult to explain.

How should this matter be handled?—Her Husband

DEAR HUSBAND: Your wife should tell the principal that she prefers to be called, "Mrs." And not only because your son might "accidentally" hear it either.

DEAR ABBY: In regard to Football Widow, who wrote, "If I had a heart attack during a game, I would be left lying on the floor until the game was over": Don't believe her. She was exaggerating. A dedicated football fan wouldn't wait that long. He would pick her up at half time so he could get back to the TV set and watch the rest of the game undisturbed.—Staten Island

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Brain Elevation Determines Salary

PITTSBURGH (AP) — "A job applicant's starting salary depends more on how far above the floor his brain is than on what the brain contains, a University of Pittsburgh administrator says.

"Men over six feet make about 10 per cent more than men under six feet on the first job," says Leland P. Deck, director of labor relations in the university's personnel department.

Deck said a 1967 survey of Pitt business school graduates found a four-per-cent higher starting salary for men over six feet and a survey of 1970 graduates found the bonus upped to 10 per cent.

"In 1967, forgetting about the height, there was a four-per-cent bonus for being cum laude," Deck said. "This time I found that bonus was not evident. There was no bonus at all!"

TALLEST GET BREAKS

In fact, the tallest graduate surveyed last year had the lowest grade point average, but got the highest starting salary.

"A 6-foot-3 guy was making $813 a month, but a 5-9 guy was getting $734," Deck said.

"The sad thing about this all is that we are not talking about laborers. . . . I am talking about guys who are being recruited by corporations because they are presumably bright, have got a brain and the brain has been trained.

"Yet they are not examining the brain, they are just hiring on the basis of the length of the spine."

Deck's research was inspired by a visit to Pittsburgh's Duquesne Club, gathering spot for many of the city's top businessmen. Deck, a veteran of 30 years in personnel work, observed that "19 out of 20 were tall men."

Deck said the reason men 6-foot-1 to 6-foot-3 are preferred is that those who do the hiring usually are not sophisticated enough to determine factors such as intelligence and motivation.

"But a tall man can be readily recognized as such by the most dimwitted employer," Deck said.

Mild Hepatitis Common American Study Shows

By VICTOR COHN

WASHINGTON (WP) — That puzzling illness you had where the doctor said vaguely, "I guess you've got a virus."

Or the time you told friends, "I don't know why I'm so tired."

Thousands of such cases may actually be mild hepatitis, according to new facts learned by three U.S. government doctors.

Hepatitis in mild form, they have found, may actually be a common disease, that has affected perhaps a fifth of the adult population at one time or a other.

Hepatitis in serious form is a severe liver disease, often called "yellow jaundice" for the way it affects skin color. In this form, its victims have included thousands of young drug users, who it it from dirty needles.

Doctors reported 64,000 serious cases of hepatitis last year. But they have long suspected that many more cases remain unreported.

Using a sensitive new detection tehnique, Drs. Robert H. Purcell, Jerrold J. Lander and Harvey J. Alter tested scores of blood samples for antibodies — the body's protective mechanisms — to hepatitis.

Precisely speaking the three sought antibodies to the Australian antigen, tiny particles which most researchers believe are associated with so-called serum hepatitis.

They found such antibodies, they reported in the Journal of Immunology, in 14.4 per cent of 97 voluntary blood donors, 22.6 per cent of 93 commercial donors, 14.8 per cent of 27 blood bank workers, 11.4 per cent of 44 NIH laboratory personnel and 82 per cent of 23 persons who have received multiple transfusions for hemophilia or other conditions.

"We now have many more samples," Purcell added in an interview, "and we've found some even higher proportions."

One thing the new work may suggest is that much serum hepatitis is not necessarily transmitted by dirty needles or other highly intimate contacts involving direct contamination of the bloodstream.

Instead, Purcell conjectures, most serum hepatitis — like infectious hepatitis the other form of the disease — may be transmitted by person to person contact, contaminated water or contaminated food. Much of the tranmission may be what epidemioligists call "fecal-oral spread" — spread of excreted virus by unwashed hands.

"We really don't know how it is spread," Purcell emphasized. "But with new detection techniques we hope we can find out."

The new finding also has significance for blood banks. Many have begun screening donors for Australia antigen and excluding anyone who demonstrates it. Should everyone who shows antibody to the antigen be excluded too?

"We don't know," Purcell said. "This too requires further study."

If such rules were made, blood banks might have to reject 15 to 20 per cent of potential donors in higher income groups and 50 per cent in lower income groups, according to the study data.

Do some persons who have mild hepatitis, perhaps without even knowing they are sick, suffer permanent liver or other damage?

The answer is again: "We don't know." But the new detection techniques, if widely applied, might help doctors spot more victims of mild cases of hepatitis and test them.

A group of New York University doctors recently reported the first successful vaccinations against serum hepatitis, in tests on children at Willowbrook State School on Long Island. But completion of this development and government licensing could be five or more years away.

Petitioners Want Victorian Parade

The Victoria Day parade was taken over by Americans, according to Kathleen Thompson, student at the Institute of Adults Stidies.

"Take away the American bands and the parade would have lasted for less than an hour," said Miss Thompson. Though there were over 20 American bands, only one local high school band marched.

Thompson charged that the parade was poorly planned; there were 10 minute gaps in the parade, local children dressed in Centennial costumes were squeezed out between two bands and majorettes marched without bands.

Fifteen people are organizing a petition to be presented to the Junior Chamber of Commerce, asking for "Victorian Victoria Day" for next year.

"We're pushing for more floats, local participation and better layout for future parades," said Miss Thompson.

Women Workers Afraid to Fight

PENTICTON, B.C. (CP) — A researcher for the British Columbia Federation said Monday a preliminary survey of salary and wage rates in the province shows women earning less than men in every category except one.

Phyllis Young was speaking in a panel discussion on the status of women report during the three-day annual convention of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs of B.C. and the Yukon which ended Monday.

She said the higher a woman goes up the ladder of skill and responsibility, the greater the difference in pay. Male accounting clerks earned 11 per cent more than women in the same job. Male bookkeepers earned 35 per cent more and male office managers 41 per cent more.

She did not say in which category women did not earn less than men.

"Present legislation on equal pay is completely ineffective," Miss Young said, "because it requires the individual to file the complaint.

"The onus is on a woman to prove that discrimination has taken place. This intimidates most women workers who would rather work for less money than risk losing their jobs."

Joan Wallace of the status of women action coordinating council of B.C. told the panel that women's themselves hold the key to improving the situation. They could not leave it up to men to formulate action, but could learn a lesson from the way men fought the federal white paper on taxation.

"Businessmen didn't sit back and talk politely to each other about those tax proposals," Mrs. Wallace said.

"They formed organizations. They prepared briefs by the hundreds and wrote letters by the thousands. They flew back and forth to Ottawa to appear before the senate and commons committees to state their case."

THE ALUMNAE

Addicted Infants Born in Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Pre-natal Health Society has been asked to educate the public on the dangers of legal and illegal drug use by expectant mothers.

Dr. A. F. Hardyment, one of the society's directors, told a meeting of the health group about two babies born recently in Vancouver who suffered from heroin withdrawal.

Studies indicated that about 25 per cent of addicted infants die of shock in their first week of life — about 10 times more than the normal infant mortality rate.

Dr. Hardyment said it is not known what happens to heroin infants after they grow up.

"They are small babies, but this may be because their mothers are undernourished. They have low blood sugar, are excessively irritable and difficult to feed during withdrawal from the drug."

He said it may be that "members of the general public are not yet ready to accept the challenge of responsible human reproduction."

ATTITUDE IS CASUAL

"For some time to come, the general public may still wish to adopt the predominantly casual attitude toward the reproduction of their kind that is so prevalent today."

The B.C. Pre-natal Health Society, established last year, grew out of a specific study Dr. Hardyment has been conducting for the last 5½ years.

He said the establishment of voluntary pre-natal review committees by the medical staffs of 26 hospitals throughout the province and the use of a standard history form have come about largely as a result of the society's work in professional education.

"All of us here believe that every unborn and newly born baby has the right to be as healthy as his genetic constitution intends him to be."

Woman Sentenced To Diet

MIAMI (UPI) — Mrs. Mary Louise Peterson, a 315-pound mother of six children, has been ordered by a criminal court judge to lose three pounds a week until her weight drops to 250 pounds.

Judge Murray Goodman made the diet part of Mrs. Peterson's three years probation Monday after finding the woman guilty of assaulting a policeman.

During Mrs. Peterson's trial, assistant public defender Stephen Mechanic told the court his client was on welfare and had been unable to work because of her excess weight. Mechanic said Mrs. Peterson's normal weight was 250 pounds.

Goodman ordered Mrs. Peterson to weigh in each week at the public health department and bring proof of her weight to Mechanic's office.

The costumes are ready, but these young dancers have almost a month of practicing ahead before performing in public.

These are five of the many young students of Wendy Packard, assistant teacher at the Vivian Briggs School of Dance who will take part in a show called Invitation to the Dance Sunday, June 20, at 2:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. at the McPherson Playhouse.

Chemicals Hard on Nylons

WILLENHALL, England (CP) — Girl workers at a Staffordshire lock-making plant are furious about an area of the factory which plays havoc with their nylon stockings and tights. A processing chemical in the air burns holes in the fabric, but the owners can't find a way of stopping it. "I get through three or four pairs a week and it's very expensive," said one girl.

Villain To Stalk Stage

Deadwood Dick, sponsored by the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria in conjunction with Victoria Days, will open tonight at 8 p.m. in the McPherson Playhouse.

The 19th century melodrama is directed by John Krich, who says it will be "a truly family show." There will be songs, dances and lively production numbers, with authentic "chase" and "suspense" music provided by a tinkling piano on stage.

The audience is expected to cheer the hero and hiss the villain. The three acts will alternate with songs and audience participation.

The Council is also sponsoring an Art and Craft showcase at the provincial museum. It opened today and will run until Monday.

Held on the second floor of the museum, it will feature demonstrations and display of painting, sculpture, photography, weaving, pottery and other crafts of local artists.

The show has been coordinated by Gordon Hambleton with Jean Bain as convener. Participating groups include the Saanich Peninsula Art Centre and the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, which will feature paintings of 100 years ago.

Givens to Battle on Provincial Level

By RON SUDLOW

TORONTO (CP) — Fighting city hall is one thing. But fighting for city hall is another.

And after four years as a Liberal backbencher in Ottawa, former Toronto mayor Philip Givens will tell you that fighting federally for city hall is a lot tougher.

Last Thursday he announced he will resign his federal seat to run in a Toronto riding in the next provincial election. He figures that will be a better way to make Ottawa aware of the needs of the cities.

It is a need he obviously feels deeply. But of his efforts and those by others to do something, he said the reaction often was a skillfully wielded stiletto from Prime Minister Trudeau.

Mr. Givens said he knew early in his federal career that an argument with the prime minister had cost him his chance for his "corporal stripes" in Parliament, but what really disturbed him was the realization that the Commons had no system to use or recognize an MP's qualifications and abilities.

PROMISED PORTFOLIO

Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon has promised him the urban affairs portfolio if his party forms a government. This, says Mr. Givens, will provide him with another lance to prod Ottawa into greater involvement in urban affairs.

"But remember, I've got to burn my bridges behind me," he said in an interview with The Canadian Press. "If my opponents lose, they still remain in public life.

"But if I lose, I drop that big salary increase; the pension rights for which I have to go through another election, my seat—and there's no road back."

The decision came, Mr. Givens said, after squabbles in caucus, being thrust on the defensive by the bureaucrats and being ignored when he felt he had something to contribute.

Mr. Givens said Prime Minister Trudeau once told the caucus he liked members to disagree and criticize.

"Yet whenever we would, there was a way he had of sort of delivering the stiletto so that you realized that you weren't exactly Number 1 boy."

CRITICS REBUKED

One caucus discussion concerning cities saw Mr. Givens supported by "13 or 14 MPs . . . and the PM got up and said 'maybe some of you guys should have run in the provincial legislature instead of coming here.'

"Well, this is a pretty rough thing to say to guys who have been wounded and bled on the battlefield to come up to support him and his government."

Mr. Givens said the prime minister later apologized.

Another clash with Mr. Trudeau over cities took place in front of reporters at a Liberal policy conference in Harrison Hot Springs, B.C., and made front-page headlines the next day.

Mr. Givens says that probably ruled out any hopes he had for a cabinet post although he really never expected one because he hadn't served his Commons "apprenticeship."

"But what really stunned me was that I couldn't really believe, having been a politician so long, that my judgment had been so outrageously wrong about the subject matter we argued about.

GIVENS
. . . fight for cities

"My main beef was not the portfolio. The tragedy of the parliamentary institution is that it has not been able to devise a system where an MP with reasonable qualifications and abilities can play a useful role."

KEPT IN TOUCH

As mayor of Toronto from 1963 to 1966, he had overseen development from a new and striking city hall. His office had a desk console with 34 buttons so he could personally talk to department heads.

"You were able to influence things and everybody knew what your thinking was."

But Ottawa was quite different. You're accorded a monastic cell of about 10 by 12 with one secretary and one telephone. You'd be amazed about the amount of howling I had to do until the MPs got a second telephone line."

"It's this business of serving an apprenticeship. I had served an apprenticeship of 15 years and had run a city and been involved with a city of two million people.

"The budget of my city was bigger than the budgets of seven of the 10 provinces. The population of my city was bigger than the population of eight of the 10 provinces.

"So how much of an apprenticeship do you serve before being asked to do something really significant?"

UNITY PARAMOUNT

He said so much energy and so much money is concerned with the problem of national unity that "there just isn't enough resources left over for practically anything else."

"The order of the priorities as far as I was concerned was very slow in developing and as far as I was concerned we just wasted four years.

"The government is a dinosaur and it is not responsible to the urgent, modern problems of today. It responds as sort of a reflex action. The danger looms up and bingo, we shoot at it and there's a panic. But there's no forethought."

at Sebastian of FORT STREET

STARTS THURSDAY 9:00 A.M. TO 6:00 P.M.
ENDS FRIDAY 9:00 A.M. TO 6:00 P.M.

Several one-of-a-kind styles in our knitwear—dresses, coats, suits, coat and dress ensembles. Our designer told us they were terrific styles in Italy—what a laugh, he should have kept them there. If you promise to go into ecstasy over them, we'll sell you one at less than half price.

You can only buy this if you promise to give it a good home. One winter coat left over, size 12/14. $100 was the price, rummaged to $37, interlined and chamois lined.

Buy our black cocktail dress size 11, and we'll throw in a $7 steak dinner at your favorite restaurant. (If your husband is under 5'6" I'll be glad to escort you). Reg. $55, in the name of rummage it's going for $33.
(Includes the $7.00 dinner) . . . or $26 without the dinner!

Please get me off the hook. Made a bet with the owner of another fashion shop that we'll sell our size 15 dress with crochet vest. It's a $55 outfit going for $19. You'll find out Monday if I won the bet.

More fun than an Auction Sale! Read this shocking news! We have 3 "wet look" midi coats, which are a little battle scarred—should sell at $60—take them away for $24 each, as is.

Lovely gowns that no one wants—will now accept $15 each for them! Will give a very secret recipe for the most delicious "Chicken soup you've ever tasted to anyone who can show us greater value anywhere!

Group of knitted suits recently arrived from Britain, have decided to include most of them in this sale for the ridiculous price of $58 on a first come, first served basis.

Just arrived—pink and navy pant suit outfit, size 9. The saleslady got a spot on the pants. Got rid of the saleslady and am getting rid of the outfit at $28 (reg. $60).

We know a lot of flu was around but did I have to buy so many black dresses in case the worst happened? Cheer up, be smart and get a $30 dress for $12. Or why not buy the whole works and open your own dress store?

Small group of Trendsetter dresses in linen and light wool being cleared at half price. These are a real steal — our contribution to British Columbia's Centennial year.

A special collection of oddments and bric-a-brac. We haven't a clue as to what's there . . . and the list goes on and on, and on. Part of the fun is finding your own thing, but after Friday, FORGET IT!

Doctor Sees Sterilization Of 'Socially Incompetents'

OTTAWA (CP) — A prominent psychiatrist has raised the possibility of sterilization of persons who prove to be socially incompetent.

Dr. John B. Fotheringham, who believes in involuntary sterilization only in certain cases of mental retardation, speculates on wider application of the process in the current issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

"When one looks around and sees the number of children who are in the care of non-retarded persons who are incompetent for the task, living in squalor, ignorance and suffering, one wonders whether the principles outlined here for dealing with the retarded do not apply equally well to us all."

Dr. Fotheringham is associate professor of the department of special education at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education.

With respect to retardation, he says that only after an honest effort at other solutions has failed should compulsory sterilization be attempted.

At the same time, many persons incompetent to raise children are competent to fulfil the other responsibilities of marriage. Yet only New Brunswick, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and Quebec do not prohibit marriage of the mentally defective or mentally ill.

LOW FERTILITY LEVEL

Sterilization for the seriously retarded hardly arises since most whose abilities are less than half their chronological age have low levels of fertility.

For the mildly retarded, it first should be determined whether the individual is competent to prevent or deal with the consequences of sexual intercourse.

After that, involuntary sterilization may be examined with other alternatives such as confinement and contraception. He says sterilization is more effective and less expensive than confinement.

But five to 10 per cent of the population is mildly retarded so that, in addition to infringing their individual rights, there is the problem of practicality of large-scale sterilization.

He suggests it would be more reasonable and effective to attack the environmental causes of poverty and an unstimulating home life and to launch an aggressive voluntary birth control program that covers easy access to contraceptives, abortion, sterilization and widespread public education.

"Only after this has been honestly tried and failed should less voluntary methods be applied."

He notes that only British Columbia and Alberta have legislation in force which permits sterilization in cases of retardation.

Dr. W. J. Bell Chief of Staff

Dr. W. J. Bell succeeded Dr. Roy Sutherland as chief of the medical staff at Mount St. Mary Hospital at the recent annual meeting of the medical staff.

Elected to the medical advisory committee to replace retiring members were Drs. W. E. Newton, C. G. Stephenson and F. A. Perera.

SENATE COMMITTEE TOLD:

CIA Secretly Paying Thais to Fight in Laos

By SPENCER RICH

WASHINGTON (WP) — Two investigators just back from Indochina told a senate foreign relations subcommittee in secret seassion that the CIA is covertly financing 4,800 Thai troops fighting in northern Laos in support of the Laotian government.

Sen. Clifford P. Case (R — N.J.) told reporters after the meeting that the CIA had begun hiring Thais several years ago to fight in northern Laos, and was now apparently considerably increasing the number because after years of war in Laos, "the pool of people available for military operations is shrinking rapidly."

These expenditures, however, have been kept secret from the public and are not even revealed in budget and appropriations documents.

Case said that the report given to the subcommittee by staffers James Lowenstein and Richard Moose confirmed his own information, obtained here privately from government sources, that "there are 4,000 to 6,000 Thai troops in Laos and the the U.S. government, through the CIA, is paying for them."

NUMBER JUMPS

Case earlier had cited one newspaper report that for six or seven years there were only 1,000 Thai troops there, but that the number had jumped in the past year.

Senators and staff members at the meeting were reluctant to discuss the Lowenstein-Moose report because, according to foreign relations committee chairman J. W. Fulbright (D — Ark.), government agencies had imposed as a condition of cooperation with the two investigators that the information they received be declassified by the executive branch before it could be made public.

However, when asked how many Thai troops were being financed by the CIA, Fulbright answered, "It's not very secret. I think it's 4,800." Other senators present later confirmed the figure privately.

Fulbright said he expected the committee to sponsor some proposals for changes in the basic CIA law, especially with regard to informing congress about activities.

'INACCURATE'

Case, who had just received a reply from secretary of state William P. Rogers to his earlier requests for information about the matter, said facts stated by Lowenstein and Moose in their report "indicated clearly to me that information contained in the state department letter was incomplete and in certain respects inaccurate."

Subcommittee chairman Stuart Symington (D — Mo.), Case and Fulbright all said it was extremely important that the Lowenstein-Moose report be declassified so that, as Case put, "we can lay the thing out for the American people so they can make the judgments'" as to whether the nation should support such activities.

Symington refused to give any details on the cost of the Thai operation but said, "the money angle is surprising, it's on the high side."

Another source said, however, that the pay and allowances for the Thais would run to perhaps 2,000 dollars a year per man — or about 10 million dollars for the 4,800 men — plus costs for equipment, transportation and other items that could easily double, perhaps triple, the initial figure.

BOMBING DOWN

Case also said the report confirmed that while general U.S. air activities over northern Laos had been decreasing, U.S. B-52 bombing raids there had increased.

Other senators present gave these added details:

● Meo tribesmen in the north, operating from a centre provided by the secret CIA base at Long Cheng, were so decimated that the Thai troops were needed to supply extra manpower.

● Total U.S. costs in Laos, not just for the Thais but for aid to the Laotian government and interdiction in the south, was so great that "100 million dollars wouldn't touch it."

● The state department has offered to have Marshall Green, assistant secretary of state for far eastern and Pacific affairs, brief the committee on Laos operations in secret session.

Sen. Frank Church (D. — Idaho) said, "the whole lurid tale of this covert war makes it obvious that, if congress is to recover control over war and peace, it must make the CIA return to the role it was originally intended to fill, that of an intelligence agency collecting information. Covert operations of this kind will have to be taken away." He is sponsoring legislation to do just that.

Before the Judge

A 21-year-old man was sentenced to six months in jail Tuesday by Judge Edmond St. Jorre when he pleaded guilty to two counts of breaking and entering with intent.

Robert J. Devine, 719 Princess, was charged after an auto body shop and a carpentry shop were found entered early Tuesday morning.

Devine was found in the area and sent home shortly before police discovered the break-ins on Market Street. He later admitted committing the offences to police.

A police officer testified that Devine entered the premises of the auto body shop and walked through an unlocked door into the carpentry shop. He left the premises, the officer said, without taking anything but leaving a comb jammed in the lock.

Devine was fined in Victoria Provincial Court May 17 for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent, driving without insurance and dangerous driving.

Prosecutor John Macintyre also read a record that included several theft over $50 and breaking, entering and theft convictions in the last four years.

John G. Coombes, 18, of 2426 Evelyn Place, was fined $200 when he pleaded guilty to shoplifting three golf balls and a pocketbook.

A security officer from the Bay testified that the accused was observed taking the items from the store about 3 p.m. May 22.

Hendrick Schuurman, 25, of Ucluelet, was fined $350 and prohibited from driving for six months when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

He was stopped by police about 8:15 p.m. May 24 on Government Street and had a breathalyzer reading of .17 blood-alcohol content at the time.

★ ★ ★

Jack Marson, 51, of 3915 Blenkinsop, was fined $400 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for impaired driving.

APPOINTED honorary aide-de-camp to Governor-General Roland Michener is Cmdr. Edmund Lee, 2039 Kendall. Commanding officer of the naval reserve unit HMCS Malahat since Jan. 1969, Lee is an astronomer at the Saanich geophysical observatory.

Pakistan Refugees Packed Into Camps

By R. SATAKOPAN

SOBROOM, India (AP) — On the western side of the Deni River, the villages in East Pakistan are destroyed and deserted.

On the eastern side of India, hundreds of thousands of refugees driven from their homes by the civil war in East Pakistan are packed into makeshift camps.

Sobroom and Ramgarh, just 100 yards across the river, both had populations of 5,000 until two months ago. Now Sobroom has about 20,000 residents, most of them refugees, and Ramgarh has almost no one left.

From March 25, when civil war broke out in East Pakistan, until May 2 Ramgarh was controlled by the followers of secessionist leader Sheik Mujibur Rahman. Then the Pakistani army moved in and, witnesses said, shelled the city and machine-gunned anyone who had not fled across the river.

Today, visitors to Sobroom see no sign of life in Ramgarh except for a few stray dogs and an occasional soldier on patrol.

FIND OVERCROWDING

Indian and foreign reporters taken on a three-day tour of refugee camps saw similar overcrowding at Petrapole, on the other side of East Pakistan about 60 miles northwest of Calcutta.

By official Indian estimates, which a visiting United Nations team said it would accept, about 2.6 million East Pakistanis have entered four Indian border states in the last seven weeks, causing social and economic problems that appear to defy solution at the moment.

Officials have expressed concern that communal violence might erupt between Hindu and Moslems within the 300 relief camps.

Friction also is developing between local Indians and the refugees.

The Indian government has expressed deep disappointment with what it describes as "totally inadequate" assistance from other countries for caring for the refugees.

NOBODY HELPS

"No prosperous country has come to the aid of the refugees," Prime Minister Indira Gandhi told a public meeting this week.

"The whole burden has fallen on India, which is already overburdened with her own problems."

The best solution, both the Indian government and a UN team that toured the refugee camps say, would be the repatriation of the East Pakistanis.

But there is no way India can force the refugees back, officials concede, and there is no sign that East Pakistan will take them back.

Sell-Out Charged

HOBBEMA, Alta. (CP) — The federal government is using "brown-skinned white men" to sell its White Paper on Indians to the native people, Harold Cardinal, president of the Indian Association of Alberta, said Monday.

"We can no longer allow these types of Indians to have pre-eminence in Alberta," Cardinal told an opening session of the association's three-day annual meeting.

Cardinal, author of a book on Indian rights, said he deplores fellow Indians who continue to remind white people that "the Indian is worthless, lazy and always drunk."

Be Sure Ottawa Counts on You

By ELIZABETH FORBES

If it has not already happened to you — it will happen sometime in the next day or so. A man or woman will appear at your door carrying a neat white tote bag with the red maple leaf of Canada embalzoned on one side above the words "census of Canada."

Forbes

He or she is one of a corpps of over 2,000 spread out in the Greater Victoria area to bring you as a householder, a form to fill in for the 1971 census.

These men and women, some young and others in their middle and older years, have been well briefed in the work they are doing.

They have studied maps of the areas in which they are working. They "cased" these areas ahead of time and they know approximately how many private dwellings, boarding homes, institutions and businesses they are responsible for. They spent hours preparing the forms they will "drop-off" to you.

However, unlike former censuses, they will not sit down with you and fill in answers to the questions on those forms.

You see, the census has gone "mod" in this year of 1971. It's joined the "do-it-yourself" movement. This time the census representative merely calls at each household and leaves the questionnaire (or form) along with an instruction booklet.

The head of the household will then complete the questionnaire for everyone living in his (or her) particular dwelling as of May 31-June 1. This will include members of the family, plus any boarders, lodgers or others present at that time.

There are many advantages to this new "self-census" method. Since it's faster than the old way, published data will be available earlier and will be more up-to-date.

With no middleman, answers will be more accurate, with less chance of indistinct or misunderstood replies. By giving householders an opportunity to consider each question carefully, look up records where necessary, and check with other members of the family, more accurate information will be produced.

If everyone co-operates, the self-census will be less costly. And you know whose money will be saved — yours . . . the taxpayer.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has devised a unique style of questionnaire to produce the information it needs with a minimum of time and effort on the part of householders.

★ ★ ★

Most of the questions are answered by simply filling in small circles printed opposite the appropriate answers. In cases where none of the indicated answers may apply, space is provided for information to be written in.

The new technique not only makes it easier and quicker to complete the questionnaire, but provides the information in a form that can be photographed and fed directly into computers for final tabulation.

Naturally, the accuracy and completeness of each individual return determines the accuracy of the census itself. Correct conclusions cannot be drawn from incomplete information. Therefore, severe penalties are provided for refusal to answer questions or wilfully giving false information on the census return.

★ ★ ★

Who is being counted? The answer, quite simply, is everybody — every man, woman and child in Canada who is alive at midnight on May 31. The census covers everyone, from new born babies to men and women over 100.

Obviously then, such a big operation, extending as it does acorss Canada from sea to sea, requires the co-operation of everyone.

It's a national effort to take stock — to find out where we stand, and how far we have to go.

CN Halted As Crews Protest

EDMONTON (CP) — Canadian National Railways freight operations west of here have been "pretty well halted" by a protest group of about 200 trainmen, engineers and firemen at Jasper, Alta., a CNR spokesman said Tuesday.

The employees booked off their jobs earlier Tuesday to protest 90-day suspensions handed out to four men accused of running through a red stop signal at Red Pass, B.C. They said "educational seminars" would continue until a complete investigation is made of the incident.

The westbound trans-continental train continued from Edson, Alta., 120 miles west of Edmonton, with supervisory personnel in control, and the CNR said it would continue operating its passenger service.

Bias Cited In Dismissal

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The judge who dismissed murder-conspiracy charges against Black Panthers Bobby G. Seale and Ericka Huggins said finding an unbiased jury to retry them would be impossible without superhuman effort which neither side should have to endure.

Superior Court Judge Harold M. Mulvey dismissed the charges Tuesday, one day after declaring a mistrial because the jury could not reach a verdict in the case against Seale, Panther national chairman, and Mrs. Huggins, a local party leader.

Mrs. Huggins, 23, who had been in custody for two years, was freed after the ruling.

Seale, 34, is held on other charges and is seeking bail. He has been imprisoned for two years including 14 months here.

Fire Hall Extension

Tenders have been called for construction of an extension to the Saanich police headquarters and fire hall on Vernon Avenue. Deadline for submitting tenders is Thursday, June 17.

GALLUP POLL

No One in Hurry For an Election

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Most voters (56%) would like Mr. Trudeau to run his full term of office and not call an election until it expires, in 1973. Less than one-in-ten (18%) think it should be in 1972, while only one-in-ten (10%) would like an election this year.

This wish that a Federal election be held off as long as possible exists everywhere in Canada in much the same proportions. And whether a voter is in managerial ranks, or in Labor, in sales, clerical, or farm occupations—thinking runs unusually parallel.

One reason for this feeling may lie in the fact that about the same number of Canadians (54%) believe that the Liberals will win again next time a national vote is called.

The question:

"As you may know, the government in Ottawa is elected on a five-year term, but often calls an election before this term is up. What do you think the present Liberal government in Ottawa should do—wait to call an election when its term is up—or call an election in 1972?"

Comparisons of the national point of view, with those in the main regional and occupational groups shows the over-all unanimity of opinion within these segments of the

FROM ARCTIC

Gas Pipeline 'Years Away'

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Howland, chairman of the National Energy Board, predicted Tuesday night that a natural-gas pipeline through Canada from the Arctic is years away.

He told the Commons resources committee it is anybody's guess how soon United States companies will get permission to go ahead with a trans-Alaska line to pipe oil south from the Prudhoe Bay wells discovered in 1968.

Estimates are that it would take two or three years to build the Alaska oil pipeline after permission came through and only then would consideration be given to piping arctic gas through Canada to U.S. markets.

Dr. Howland was defending the energy board against suggestions by committee members that federal authorities lack the technical knowledge to promote a Canadian pipeline route.

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) asked whether Canada had the technical knowledge to stand up to the United States in negotiations over use of a Canadian oil route as an alternative to the U.S. plan for an oil pipeline across Alaska and ocean tankers from there to the U.S. west coast.

STUDIES GO ON

Dr. Howland replied vigorously that studies are well-advanced and continuing, including study of Soviet experience by two engineers who speak and read Russian.

He said Canada has built up a solid background on the economics of an oil-pipeline route through Canadian territory.

Dr. Howland said the board is in touch with the oil and gas companies and knows they are not going to apply to build a pipeline soon in the Canadian Arctic. He said researchers can do a great deal of work before any application comes in.

He indicated that Canada would be in line for a natural gas pipeline to carry the by-product of Prudhoe Bay oil wells, but only after permission comes through for transporting the oil.

"They haven't got a permit yet to build the trans-Alaska pipeline," he said.

RAILWAY LINK TO OIL EYED

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Don Jamieson said Tuesday he would be happy to have talks with the United States on railway extension from Canada to the northern Alaska oilfields.

He was replying in the Commons to Douglas Hogarth (L—New Westminister) who asked whether there will be discussions with British Columbia and Alaska on possible extension of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway from British Columbia to Prudhoe Bay on the North Slope of Alaska.

Hogarth said this would be a means of avoiding shipment of oil from Alaska by tanker down the Canadian West Coast.

Jamieson said studies are being made of railway extension into the Yukon and Northwest Territories. But there had been no representations from the U.S. or Alaska.

Park Sewage Dumping Bid Withdrawn

Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan said Tuesday he has ordered engineers studying disposal methods to withdraw their application for a Pollution Control Board permit to dump 28,000 gallons of treated sewage a day into the Similkameen River from Manning Park Lodge.

Instead, the minister said, the sewage effluent will be disposed of on land. It will cost an estimated $10,000 to $20,000 more than the $100,000 budgeted for sewage treatment but will have the added advantage of being easy to maintain.

Several groups in the area protested that no other discharge of sewage effluent into the Similkameen is permitted and they argued that the government shouldn't be allowed to become the first to do so.

The department of recreation and conservation administers Manning Park Lodge and ski-hill, east of Allison Pass on the Hope-Princeton Highway.

Angry Catholics Disrupt Tory Nominating Meeting

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier William Davis of Ontario got everything but the polite applause he expected Tuesday at what was supposed to be a routine nominating convention.

The intention was for Mr. Davis to step on to the stage of a local high school and congratulate Con. Claude Bennett of Ottawa on being named to run in Ottawa South in the next provincial election.

But that's as far as the expectations go.

As Mr. Davis and his entourage stepped on to the stage they were greeted by a barrage of boos and challenges—amplified through hand-held bullhorns—from about 500 angry and outspoken separate school supporters.

So strong was the protest, the official party was forced to give up the stage after about 30 minutes and regroup in an adjacent corridor before sallying forth again, this time to the accompaniment of a Scottish piper.

HEARS DEMANDS

But during the 30 minutes, Mr. Davis withstood noisy demands by the protesters for extended provincial grants to support separate schools through Grade 13. The province now supports them through Grade 10.

"It is our God-given right to have these grants," shouted one amplified voice at the former education minister who leaned on the speaker's podium.

Others accused Mr. Davis of "turning the province against more than 400,000 Catholic students and their legitimate aims."

Mr. Davis managed to reply that the issue would be considered again by the province in the very near future, but this in no way salved the heated anger aimed at him.

Feelings eventually started to become physical as more and more Conservative supporters found their way into the auditorium and at one stage an elderly woman was seen to land a closed-fist punch on the head of a young, loud protester. He appeared more astonished than injured.

At last, Mr. Davis gave a curt "that's enough" and said he would not be pushed around as he moved from the podium to a chair on the stage.

This roused the protesting group to another loud, prolonged chorus of boos before they finally abdicated the auditorium to the Conservatives and what had by now become anti-climax—public acknowledgment of Mr. Bennett as their election candidate.

Truck Kills 69

NEW DELHI (AP) — A truck plowed into a village festival in southern India, killing 69 persons and injuring 59, the Andhra Pradesh state government reported.

B.C. Hydro Shifts Personnel

Four executive changes made by B.C. Hydro to be effective June 1 will affect financial departments of the public utility company.

Three of the positions, including a former Victorian, involve ex-employees of B.C. Electric Co., fore-runner of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority.

Gordon Ewing, assistant to the chief financial officer who joined BCE here in 1939, is to be manager of the budget and control department. He has worked in Vancouver since 1958.

L. E. Beard, whose B.C.E. service dates from 1941, has been promoted from assistant comptroller to comptroller; G. A. Woodbury, general accounting manager and a BCE veteran from 1941, becomes assistant to the chief financial officer.

I. R. A. Mills, assistant-treasurer, will be treasurer. He joined B.C. Power Commission, the former government-owned hydro system, in 1958 as director of finance.

Reorganization Bill Near Passage

By JOHN HAY

OTTAWA (CP)—The government reorganization bill is heading toward passage in the Commons today, freed from a debating logjam by all-party agreement.

The bill's major provisions would permit the prime minister to create new ministries of state, and would create a department that would take over environmental jobs now being done by several departments.

It passed committee-of-the-whole discussion Tuesday, and debate on third and final reading starts today.

The measure has been before the House for weeks, with government spokesmen labelling opposition tactics a filibuster.

In line with the deal worked out last week, Treasury Board President C. M. Drury offered an amendment Tuesday that would allow the Commons to debate the creation of each new ministry. The amendment was passed.

DAVIS

GETS FISHERIES TITLE

The government also won points in the deal: Removal of the limit of five new ministries that could be created, and opposition agreement to pass the bill by tonight.

Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin took credit for the amendment calling for debate on new ministries. He said it was a good example of what a responsible opposition could achieve.

Stanley Knowles, New Democrat House leader, agreed.

He was also pleased with what he termed the growing unease among Liberal backbenchers about the increasing powers of the government.

But James A. McGrath (PC—St. John's East) was not satisfied that fisheries would be adequately treated even with the extra title for Mr. Davis.

The environment department needed a deputy minister of fisheries as well, he said.

That was not in the agreement, Mr. Drury replied. A separate deputy for fisheries would mean a separate department.

Mr. McGrath responded that he would be happy if one deputy minister held both titles, just as the minister would.

DEFEAT AMENDMENT

The House later defeated an amendment from Mr. Knowles that would have done just that.

John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) complained that the fisheries industry would be represented in the department by a mere assistant deputy minister, one of nine in the new department.

He accused the government of deliberately downgrading the role of fisheries in Canada and said Prime Minister Trudeau apparently had not brought the subject up during his trip to the Soviet Union.

The House also passed a clause Tuesday authorizing the prime minister to appoint as many parliamentary secretaries as there are ministers.

The maximum now is 16.

"We are buying a pig in a poke," warned Mr. Knowles. MPs could not know now how many parliamentary secretaries would or could be appointed.

Thomas M. Bell (PC—Saint John-Lancaster) said Parliament would expect more work from parliamentary secretaries than they have delivered in the past.

In reply to opposition queries, Mr. Drury said there was no announced plan to divide the cabinet into tiers with the new ministerial appointments.

ALL CABINET MEMBERS

Under the bill, ministers could be appointed to take over ministries —such as urban affairs—or to assist existing ministers.

Mr. Drury won passage of another amendment that would put new public service pension provisions into effect as of April 30, 1971.

That was aimed at benefitting employees at Canadian forces bases in Manitoba who have been laid off recently by base shut-downs.

The remainder of the bill will go into effect as soon as possible after the bill is passed by the Senate, Mr. Drury said.

Referring to the clauses on the cabinet, Mr. Baldwin said the Trudeau government has a sorry record of gross administrative incompetence, marked by blunders, rigidity, stupidity and lack of co-ordination.

While it had introduced about 75 proposals at the start of the Commons session last October, it had only put 25 measures through the Commons.

Signal Sexy To Whales

OTTAWA (CP) — A sexy signal from a marker over the sunken oil tanker Irving Whale near Prince Edward Island has attracted more than 25 interested whales, O. G. Stoner, deputy transport minister, said Tuesday.

Mr. Stoner told the Commons public accounts committee that a pinging sound emitted by the marker has put the whales in a "spawning mood."

The whales spout whale oil, prompting local reports of oil pollution, he said.

Committee Room Highlights

OTTAWA (CP) — Following are highlights of Tuesday's parliamentary committee meetings:

COMMONS

Resources — Despite numerous protests to the contrary, Robert D. Howland, chairman of the National Energy Board, showed that delivering western Canadian crude oil to Montreal by pipeline would increase the cost of crude in Montreal between 40 and 75 cents a barrel compared with the delivered cost of imported crude oil.

Finance — After the Conservatives had helped the Liberals beat back a series of amendments by Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) to nationalize the proposed Canada Development Corp., Marcel Lambert, Conservative financial critic said he feared people dependent on estates for their livelihood would suffer through unwise investment in the corporation.

Fisheries — W. Robert Martin, deputy operations chairman for the federal fisheries board, drew the ire of John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) when despite the testimony of Gus Etchegary of St. John's, chairman of the Newfoundland Frozen Fish Trade Association, M. Martin said the department feels that with few exceptions East Coast fisheries are not being over-exploited.

Public accounts — O. G. Stoner, deputy transport minister, said raising the sunken oil barge Irving Whale off Prince Edward Island will be done at the expense of the owners, Irving Oil Co. He sugested the government would raise the barge in September and charge the cost back to the company.

Labor — Before passing the proposed unemployment insurance bill and sending it back to the Commons for third reading, the committee refused an invitation from Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey to include MPs in coverage under the bill. Although a number of members spoke in favor of the idea, none moved an amendment when given the opportunity.

Northern development — Digby Hunt, assistant deputy minister of the department, said he expects increased exchanges of information between Canada and the Soviet Union on northern development as a result of Prime Minister Trudeau's 12-day visit to Russia.

Broadcasting — G. Hamilton Southam, director-general of the National Arts Centre, said three programs are planned to assist performing arts across the country and ease the growing criticism that the national centennial project was intended only to serve the people of Ottawa. These projects include a national bookings office, development of a drama festival and commissioning of new Canadian works for performance in the centre.

SENATE

National finance — John Young, chairman of the prices and incomes commission, said the country must opt for pay and price restraints if it wants full employment without inflation. Even so, he feared that those who say Canada can emerge from present high unemployment and at the same time avoid price inflation are being too optimistic, especially in the short run.

CHINA'S MAO 'CAN JUMP OVER MOON'

CHELTENHAM, England (CP) — Engineer George Watt, jailed for three years in China for alleged spying, opened a club called the China Spy.

"Friends have asked if I'm worried about offending Chairman Mao, but as far as I'm concerned he can go jump over the moon," 38-year-old Watt said.

Arm Cuts to Driver

DUNCAN — Richard La Fleur of Duncan suffered severe lacerations to his arm Sunday when the car he was driving went out of control and hit a ditch.

He is in satisfactory condition in Cowichan hospital. Police are investigating the accident.

'Too Much Westward Ho'

VANCOUVER (CP) — There are too many persons with criminal records coming to British Columbia and becoming a burden on the taxpayers by immediately seeking welfare, a B.C. provincial court judge said Tuesday.

Judge Larry Eckhardt made the comment in sentencing two Toronto men, Frederick Shaw, 45, and James curtis, 24, to three years and four months respectively for a skid road strong-arming that netted them $16.

Both men told the court they went on welfare for the first time in their lives after coming to Vancouver.

NYLON UNDIES UPSET SENSITIVE COMPUTERS

LEEDS, England (CP) — New, ultra-sensitive computers at Leeds University have run into a tight problem—nylon panties and stockings. Laboratory girl assistants wearing the nylon offenders create enough static electricity to put the computers right off their numerical figures. "I have always worn nylon underwear," one girl said, "but I have not sparked off anything so far."

Young Songwriter Likes the Quiet

By MARVIN ZIVITZ

HALIFAX (CP) — If Gene MacLellan has his way, it's going to be a quiet summer at his home 25 miles outside of Charlottetown.

There won't even be a telephone to disturb him and his wife of five months, Claudia, as he concentrates on his favorite pastime—songwriting.

There will be a few concerts at the Confederation Centre in Charlottetown and an appearance at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto and maybe one or two television shows. But only a few.

"I just can't express myself with words unless I'm writing them down," the lanky composer said here recently during a break in the taping of CBC's Singalong Jubilee. "Man, I can't think on my feet."

Viewers of shows like Singalong Jubilee and Nashville North and fans who have attended his infrequent concerts will probably disagree. But they don't know what the 33-year-old composer of hits like Snowbird and Hand in the Hand goes through when the lights go on.

GETS STAGE FRIGHT

Song writing hasn't always been a way of life for Gene MacLellan. He only started writing in 1966 and only gained national attention in 1970. Before that, it was a long, rough road.

The first stumbling block for the reserved young writer was a case of polio as a child after his family moved to the Toronto area from Val d'Or, Que. Those were the days before the Salk vaccine, and he suffered further effects from the disease when he was nine.

As a teen-ager he played with rock bands throughout Ontario in stuffy school gymnasiums and in ramshackle dance halls. He played with bands whose names are long forgotten—until he was injured in an automobile accident coming home from one of his countless appearances.

Following the accident, of which he is constantly reminded by a patch over his left eye, he left Ontario and show business for Prince Edward Island, where he just wanted time to think and figure out where he was headed.

MONEY ROLLS IN

On the island, he held a variety of jobs ranging from an attendent in a psychiatric hospital to picking apples and potatoes.

Then the song writing began. First he sent out some tapes, including one of his million-seller-to-be, Snowbird. Then there were appearances on the Don Messer Show and on Singalong Jubilee. And in 1969, a contract with Capital Records.

The albums, television appearances and royalties from song writing—Snowbird has been recorded by more than 30 artists—have meant a lot of money—more than a guy can make picking potatoes on P.E.I.

Counsel for Crux Says Securities Transaction Legal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawyer Jack McGivern, counsel for former Commonwealth Trust Co. president A. G. Duncan Crux, told a British Columbia Supreme Court jury Tuesday he will call evidence which he says will show that a $715,462 securities transaction in 1968 was properly handled.

Crux is charged with theft by conversion and with false pretences involving this amount. The Crown alleged the offences took place between Sept. 1 and Dec. 1, 1968.

He is alleged to have used securities of three firms—Eastpoint Holdings Ltd., Fredder Enterprises Ltd., and Maemar Enterprises Ltd.—in a manner which had not been authorized by them.

Mr. McGivern opened the case for the defence after prosecutor Kenneth Fawcus had completed the Crown's evidence against the former Commonwealth president.

The trial, before Mr. Justice A. B. Macfarlane and a jury of 10 men and two women, resumed after an adjournment earlier this month to permit H. A. Harrison Smith, a Kelowna lawyer now living in Shasta, Calif., to give evidence there before a commissioner.

EVIDENCE READ

The court was told that Mr. Smith was unable to come to Vancouver but had agreed to give voluntary evidence before an American commissioner—a California lawyer—and lawyers for both the Crown and defence in the Vancouver case.

Mr. Smith's evidence was read into the Vancouver Assize Court proceedings Tuesday by Mr. McGivern.

In his California commission evidence, he said that he had practiced law in Kelowna from 1952 until 1969, that he had become interested in politics there on behalf of the Conservative Party and at one time ran — unsuccessfully—against Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

He testified that he acted as lawyer for Mrs. Mabel Martin, a Kelowna businesswoman, in the operating of her group of investment companies — Eastpoint Holdings Ltd., Fredder Enterprises Ltd., and Maemar Enterprises Ltd.

Mr. Smith said he was solicitor for the three firms, was a director of two of them and secretary for all three.

STUDY INVESTMENT

He testified that Eastpoint was told that certain of Commonwealth's Bahamas companies required refinancing and that he was instructed by Mrs. Martin to investigate for possible investment purposes.

Eventually, he said, a transaction was worked out between Crux and Eastpoint in which certain securities of Mrs. Martin's firms were to be pledged.

He stated that on instructions from Mrs. Martin the deal was carried out, with details left to him to refine. He said it was required that there be security for Eastpoint.

He added that the deal, which he termed a normal business transaction, was never concluded.

'Big Gun' Policy For U.S. Police?

TORONTO (CP)—The president of the Canadian Police Association said Tuesday night he disagreed with advice to police officers to "speak softly and carry a big gun."

Syd Brown said he felt such advice would only serve to aggravate the problem of police killings.

Mr. Brown was commenting on remarks made earlier in the day by Carl Parsell, president of the 150,000-member International Conference of Police Associations.

Mr. Parsell told a meeting of the Police Officers Association of Michigan in Lansing that "if police killings are to end, it looks like the only people who are interested are the police officers themselves."

He said "shotguns must be in every patrol car and be ready for use every minute of every day."

THREE KILLED

Three police officers have been killed in the United States during the last week, two in New York and one in Norway, Mich.

Mr. Brown said he thought Mr. Parsell was speaking basically for policemen in the U.S. where they had a "real problem."

He said that if police started to take positive action there would be no way to stop it.

"I can understand the attitude," said Mr. Brown. "But I don't agree with it."

He said that so far the same problem did not exist in Canada and he hoped that it never would.

Fine Payment Extensions Ruled Out

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mr. Justice E. E. Hinkson of the British Columbia Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that provincial court judges have no jurisdiction under the Summary Convictions Act to grant time extensions on payment of fines.

The ruling was announced as he dismissed an application to free James Brian McPhillips, jailed April 1 for failure to pay an $8,500 assessment under the Social Services Act, levied in 1968.

McPhillips had already been granted two one-year extensions to pay the money by provincial court judge D. D. Jones when he appeared in court again earlier this year to apply for a further extension.

At the time he was told Judge Jones was away for a year and that no other judge could hear his application. Subsequently, he was sent to Haney Correctional Institute for failure to make payment.

Mr. Justice Hinkson ruled it would not appear there was any jurisdiction for a provincial court judge to extend time for payment once the original payment period had been set. Such procedure is allowed in criminal cases.

Health Plan Change Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The board of directors of the Registered Nurses Association of British Columbia said Tuesday night nurses must be included in planning for radical changes in the delivery of health services.

In a meeting preceding the opening of the association's 59th annual meeting today, the board charged that fragmented health services in B.C. currently do not meet the best use of the tax dollar.

The board urged a unified approach, integrating public health, mental health and hospital insurance services to provide better care for the public.

It said the association's offer to assist in such planning was accepted by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark a year ago, but to date the association has not been given the opportunity to participate.

Municipal Gains Tax Advanced

100 MILE HOUSE, B.C. (CP) — Mayor Harold Moffatt of Prince George says he—for one—would be prepared to introduce a capital gains tax on property, before Ottawa does.

Addressing delegates to north-central municipal association meeting last week in this British Columbia Cariboo community, Mr. Moffatt agreed with the suggestion by guest speaker Dr. Reid Elliot, an economist with the University of Victoria.

Mr. Moffatt—mayor of a city with a population of over 33,000—said he wouldn't mind putting the idea to the test in Pince George even if it meant going all the way to the supreme court.

Dr. Elliot had earlier described the municipalities as a "rather ineffectual lot" who have watched Ottawa step into the taxation field, imposing only one tax—a business tax—while the senior governments have imposed the remaining tariffs.

City Man Receives Keys to New Car

Victoria resident R. P. Gibson is a happy man today. His name was drawn by Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis as the winner of a 1971 Dodge Demon Monday night.

Gibson, of 2520 Government, received the keys to his car in a special presentation today. The raffle for the car was sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Saanich.

Woodward's 1st. Store 1892

This is the store that was . . . 79 years ago. In 1892, Charles Woodward purchased the option on two city lots at the corner of Harris Street and Westminster Ave. (which is Main and Georgia today) in Vancouver. It was on this site that he built his first store — a three storey wooden frame building 55' x 75', during the C.P.R. boom of that year.

The main departments were ladies' and men's clothing, shoes, boots, piece goods and groceries.

Charles Woodward, Founder

In the beginning, when Charles Woodward founded his first store in Vancouver in 1892, he formulated a code of ideals: to build a store that would be a credit to the community; to maintain quality, and to present goods at the fairest possible prices. These ideals are the heritage of Woodward's today.

As we celebrate the anniversary of B.C. joining Canada, we pledge anew these time-honored policies that have stimulated our growth from a single store in 1892, to fourteen stores and shopping centres in 1971.

Today, as in the past, it is our desire to offer you the services that have made it a family tradition to shop at Woodward's.

Woodward's Grocery Department As It Looked In 1904

Back in 1904 when Woodward's Grocery Department was just a small section of the Woodward's Department Store, the aisles and shelves were lined with countless products and tins of that day's food needs. Each customer received the personal attention by having their food orders individually attended to by the friendly staff. Although the Woodward's Food Floors of 1971 have mushroomed — there's 14 Food Floors now — and are streamlined with modern equipment, self-serve service and spacious shopping areas to make food shopping easier, the basic principles still are foremost today as they were in the past . . . wide selection, high quality and good value.

Government Drug Education Program Starts

By KEN KELLY
Canadian Press Science Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is getting into drug education under the label of drug information as part of the federal program on non-medical drug use.

This has been made clear by Dr. Aurele Beaulnes, the Montreal pharmacology professor organizing the new program.

Education is a provincial responsibility so Ottawa steers clear of putting that tag to its activities and instead refers to the program as drug information.

Its substitution of information caused concern that Dr. Beaulnes and his associates will provide a primer on drug use for potential drug abusers.

Not so, says the lean 43-year-old doctor who commutes here two or three days a week from his other job as supervisor of PhD students at McGill University.

"We are convinced that just giving the facts is not sufficient," he said in an interview. "Others have tried information alone and failed.

"This is why we established as a number one priority the development of novel channels to reach people more effectively."

OPENED CHANNEL

Dr. Beaulnes opened one of the channels himself, personal contact with the underground press—he prefers to call it the parallel press. He looks to it as one way to keep up on the counter culture. He also has been getting experience in communication on open-line radio shows in Montreal.

Another channel on which he is concentrating is teaching the teachers.

He plans extensive workshops, courses and national and regional meetings at which educators will learn the facts about drugs and their effects, and the social and psychological factors that lead to drug-taking.

Pharmacological, psychological and sociological facts about drug-taking will be stressed. So also will information on solving personal anxieties that may cause a turn to drug taking, on helping individuals achieve maturity and on the outlets to individual drives which now may be channelled into drug experimentation.

The information program is divided into five main areas, starting with data retrieval from world sources and storage in the National Science Library for ready reference.

PANEL OF ANALYSTS

Dr. Beaulnes has begun to build a panel of data analysts who will work full or part time to sift out what should go to the data processors for distribution.

Their selection is the raw material for written, audio-visual, film or other methods of communication. A complete analysis of segments of the population and methods of reaching them has been commissioned.

The communications section will get into disseminating and running the programs, contracting for films and writers.

The final arm will be a network of regional units starting with Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver, who will be the local distribution points.

The regional units also will perform a more important role than just agents. They will provide a finger on the pulse of their own communities and mould the information program to fit the need.

All 36 Seats To Williams

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (Reuter) — Prime Minister Eric William's People's National Movement captured all 36 seats in Parliament for its fourth straight five-year term.

It was the greatest victory for the PNM since it came to power in 1956. The election Monday was the second held since the twin-island state of Trinidad and Tobago received independence from Britain in 1962.

The PNM won all 28 contested seats as well as the eight uncontested seats. Major opposition parties boycotted the election over demands for the vote of 18-year-olds.

Flights Barred

NUERNBERG (AP) — City authorities banned aircraft flights over Nuernberg to protect an exhibition of Albrecht Duerer paintings from possible damage by plane crashes. Four hundred Duerer originals insured for $81.9 million are on display at the German National Museum to honor the 500th birthday anniversary of Nuernberg's most famous son.

U.S. Seen PlayingMatchmaker Role To Soothe Far Eastern Hostilities

Japan's Might Feared by China

By STANLEY KARNOW
The Washington Post

Though the question of potential relations between America and Peking is currently fashionable, the real issue in the Far East during the coming decade is going to be the rivalry between China and Japan. And that issue may well involve the United States.

At the heart of the matter is the fact that even though it's economy is gradually cooling off, Japan's growth in the years ahead will continue to be phenomenal.

Indeed, estimates indicate that the Japanese gross national product will eventually exceed that of all the rest of Asia from the Suez Canal to the Pacific.

Nothing frightens the Chinese more than the spectre of a powerful Japan. In the interests of achieving a semblance of stability in the Far East, therefore, the United States could conceivably play a role in arranging an accomadation between Peking and Tokyo.

Underlying Peking's fear of Japan is the traditional Chinese view of the Japanese as cultural copycats who went on to surpass China in almost every way. Exacerbating this fear, of course, is the memory of Japan's invasion of China.

What especially worries the Chinese at the moment is the possibility that the Japanese, propelled by their enormous economic dynamism, are inevitably headed towards remilitarization. That this concern is genuine is relected in the extent to which the Chinese voice their apprehensions about Japan in domestic radio commentaries.

In one broadcast the other day, for example, Peking went to some length to document the new Japanese five-year defence program, which starts next year. The Chinese described the program as a "big leap forward" in Japan's military development and that phrase, though hackneyed, is not inaccurate.

According to official Japanese sources, the new program calls for the construction of a thousand modern aircraft as well as 200 warships, including highly sophisticated missile-launching vessels. Japan's ground forces will also be strengthened by 900 tanks, 850 armored vehicles and 230 helicopters.

The program is slated to cost over $16 billion or more than twice the amount Japan is currently spending for defense. In addition, the growth in military spending is expected to outpace that of the Japanese national economy.

While this expenditure is small in terms of Japan's huge resources, Japanese magnitudes are such that it appears gigantic to the Chinese. In Peking's eyes, moreover, the tremendous thrust of the Japanese ecomomy makes the prospect of Japan's military buildup seem all the more menacing.

The Chinese also doubt assertions by Japanese leaders that Japan is primarily concentrating on self-defence. Equally unconvincing to Peking are Tokyo's claims that Japan will not go nuclear.

Seen objectively, however, Chinese qualms about Japan's rearmament seem largely illusory. The Japanese, though the world's most aggressive businessmen, are still reluctant to transfer their belligerency back to militarism. With good reason, their revulsion against nuclear weapons remains strong.

But the Chinese perception of reality is more important than reality itself. Thus, as it begins to edge slowly in the direction of a rapprochement with China, the United States may be able to contribute to relieving Peking of its anxieties towards Japan.

On the one hand, the United States can perhaps reassure the Chinese by making it clear that Japan's defence development is not part of an American plan for a new Asian military alliance centred in Tokyo, as President Nixon proposed before he took office.

Professor Edwin O. Reischauer, the former American ambassador to Tokyo, also suggests that the Chinese ought to be persuaded that the U.S. security treaty with Japan actually works in their favor. For, as Reischauer points, out, the treaty acts to restrain Japanese militarism by providing Japan with a defense shield.

Despite their propaganda, the Chinese have dropped a few hints lately that they may prefer continued American influence in Japan to the emergence of what they call an "independent strategic unit" of the Japanese.

Shaping new power balances in Asia will not be easy. Hence the decline of the American military presence in the region argues for an escalated U.S. diplomatic effort — which is an added reason for the United States to strive to establish links with Peking.

Jordan Controls Forces

By DREW MIDDLETON

AMMAN, Jordan (NYT) — Only nine months ago, the Palestinian guerrillas, apparently secure in their Jordanian stronghold, were widely regarded as a powerful element in the affairs of the Middle East.

Now, however, they are defeated, divided and quarrelling over their future role and strategy. They appear, for the moment at least, to be a spent force.

Under firm, constant pressure from the Jordanian army, 2,500 to 3,000 of them have moved into the Dibbin Woods on the Ajlun Heights 35 miles northeast of this now-peaceful capital.

Northwest of the Heights, along the Syrian frontier, 1,000 or more other guerrillas live precariously under army surveillance.

POLITICS?

According to anonymous spokesmen in Amman and the northern hill towns, the guerrilla leaders are considering a political instead of a military role for the movement, which numbered about 10,000 men last year.

No agreed political strategy has yet emerged. However, some spokesmen talk of going underground and waging a war of assassination, sabotage and terror against King Hussein's moderate government.

But on the basis of comments by others and assessments by the government, it seems likely that the guerrillas, or Fedayeen, may move toward forming a political opposition, while maintaining the semblance of belligerence toward Israel.

The Fedayeen's basic quarrel with the government has been over their insistence on a free hand in their military forays against the Israelis. The government, fearful of Israeli countermeasures in Jordan, has insisted on the right to control the guerrillas' activities.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

BASEBALL. 5 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. The Atlanta Braves and the Montreal Expos meet. Dave Van Horne and Don Drysdale report the action.

★ ★ ★

MEN FROM SHILOH 7:30 p.m., Chennel 5. (Rerun) A good guest cast gives this episode strong drama as well as depth. Lee Majors, as Tate, works to find the evidence that will free a doctor (Edward Binns) convicted of murder and sentenced to hang. Lew Ayres plays the judge, Tom Tryon is the sheriff, Jane Wyatt plays the doctor's wife, and Pat Harty a saloon gal whose testimony convicted the doctor.

★ ★ ★

THE COURTSHIP OF EDDIE'S FATHER 7:30 p.m., Channel 4 (Rerun) Leading feminist Cynthia Kurlan (Lori Saunders) decides there's only one way to prove her point in trying to persuade Tom Corbett (Bill Bixby) to run a favorable fem lib article in his magazine. She romances Corbett, in turn-around situation. She sends him flowers, keeps flattering him about his looks and dress and when they go out on a date, she picks up the check. A lot of guys would welcome a situation like that.

★ ★ ★

PLIMPTON! THE MAN ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE 8 p.m. Channel 4 (Rerun) Dilettante George Plimpton turns his interests to the circus in this special repeat. In his Walter Mitty-ish pursuits, he joins the Flying Apollos on the trapeze at the Clyde Beatty-Cole Bros. Circus, performing in front of a live audience. He ventures into the lion's cave, and rides an elephant, and joins the clown corps. Alas, he doesn't get shot out of a cannon.

★ ★ ★

JUST JAZZ 8:30 p.h., Channel 9 This is the first of 10 programs spotlighting jazz, starting with pianist Erroll Garner. A mind-floating exercise with the man who nums along with his own free-style, often extemporaneous playing. Featured are his own compositions, including the beautiful "Misty."

★ ★ ★

TO ROME WITH LOVE 8:30 p.m., Channel 7 An expecially amusing plot tonight, taking on a note of relevency. Alison (Joyce Menges) is offered a role in an improvisational hippie film being made in Rome. The experience impresses her and threatens to alter her life style. She wants to join the movie crew and wander around Europe in a minibus.

★ ★ ★

FIRING LINE 9 p.m., Channel 9 William Buckley Jr., the staunch right-wing writer, publisher and TV host, moves his interview show over to NET tonight after several years in successful syndication. This inaugural show will feature two men motivated to block President Richard nixon's re-election: Republican congressman Paul McCloskey of California, who has hinted he may oppose the President in primaries, and the other is a former Democratic Congressman Allard Lowenstein, of Long Island, who spearheaded the dump-Johnson movement in 1968. Buckley is a Nixon supporter, which promises an interesting confrontation.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Many an elderly man has come to me with one or two ruptures in his groin where a loop of bowel manages to come down along the channel that was made for the passage of the spermatic cords (carrying semen) up to the base of the bladder. When the loop of bowel pushes through, the man can get pain and discomfort in his lower adbomen.

The loop of bowel will sometimes slip back into the proper place, but if it gets stuck and becomes "strangulated" so that no blood is able to flow into the tissue, that portion of the bowel will turn black and die. Then unless a surgeon can quickly go in and free the loop of bowel, the person can lose his life. A rupture can appear at almost any time of life and can sometimes last for years as a soft lump in the groin.

Ruptures are rare in women, and when they come, the loop of bowel goes through the small opening in the lower groin through which the large artery in the pelvis goes through into the front of the thigh.

In many a male patient, a good surgeon ought to be able to push the loop of bowel back up and then close the opening through which the spermatic cord passes. The person should be careful to find a very skilful surgeon, as the operation requires an expert to do it well.

Some elderly men so fear the operation that they prefer instead to wear a truss, which is a soft pad of material that is fastened to a leather belt that goes around the man's abdomen. Sometimes this can keep the loop of bowel in place. Such trusses can be found in stores that sell medical supplies.

Area Boys' Clubs Agree to Merge

The Langford Boys' Club has agreed to become a branch of the Victoria Boys' Club and thereby enter the Community Chest's fold of United Appeal agencies.

The move, effective in January 1972, means the Langford club will be eligible for Community Chest funds, Henry Bennett, executive director of the Chest said Tuesday.

The club had applied to the Chest seeking United Appeal funds.

Community Chest president Allan Cox said the move is the first concrete application of principles in the 1970 Capital Regional District-Community Council study on the regionalization of social services.

The study recommended that social service agencies avoid duplication of services, especially in administration. But it did not specifically refer to the two boys' clubs.

Cox also said he expects several other steps along the guidelines of the report to be taken in the near future. Most will affect agencies which have applied for membership in the Community Chest.

RECRUIT TRAINING was successfully completed this month by former Victorian Const. Patrick Michael Kelly in Regina, Sask. Kelly has now been transferred for duty in Ontario.

NEW AMBULANCE has been purchased by Saanich municipality for its fire department, replacing a 1961 Cadillac. A General Motors van, the new ambulance will be on duty 24 hours a day and has a crew of two trained men.

Freedomite Women On Hunger Strike

VANCOUVER (CP)—Sons of Freedom Doukhobor women on an extended hunger strike in Oakalla prison in suburban Burnaby are being checked by the prison doctor weekly and a force-feeding diet has been prescribed, Malcolm Matheson, provincial deputy superintendent of corrections, said Tuesday.

He said he has been getting periodic reports from the warden who told him the women were still in good condition. Their fast began almost six months ago.

That fast ended after 30 days and later two of the women were transferred to the Kingston, Ont., women's prison.

Meanwhile, 32 Sons of Freedom children taken out of classes in Agassiz school district Friday as a protest against what a spokesman for parents called a lack of co-operation from the RCMP and the government on requests for further investigation of the fire and new trials for the women, failed to show up again Tuesday.

Agassiz school board plans a special meeting tonight to consider the protest.

Bookmobile Discontinues Stops at Area Schools

The five school stops made by the Greater Victoria Public Library's bookmobile are to be abandoned.

The library board Tuesday approved the suspension of services to Marigold, Strawberry Vale, Elk Lake, St. Joseph's and Northridge schools.

Suspension of the stops was recommended by Terry Smith, who was appointed bookmobile librarian May 3. Principals of the schools will be notified of the board's decision.

REASONS

In a report prepared by library director Donald Miller, Smith gave his reasons for the stoppages:

"The child is under the delusion concerning the service offered to him by the library system. If he allows the convenience of a bookmobile visit to replace a visit to a branch or the central library he is cheating himself, while quite probably not understanding that this is the case.

"During a school visit the atmosphere is one of forced circulation. Each class is allowed 20 minutes to visit the bookmobile. Because of space limitations each class has to be split into two. Therefore, each student is allowed 10 minutes in a full, busy vehicle to select books for a month.

MORE HARM

"The schools are not encouraged to develop their own bookrooms or libraries. Since these are the cornerstones of modern education, our visits may be doing more harm than good."

Five new stops are included in the bookmobile's new schedule, slated to go into effect July 1. Bookmobile service will be extended to James Bay for the first time.

Miller explained that the new schedule was designed to cut down the bookmobile's travelling time and extend its service to more people.

In his report Miller recommended that the bookmobile service be suspended while the driver is on a four-week holiday.

He explained that the librarian and clerical staff could be used to publicize the new schedules during the month.

The board asked Miller to investigate the possibility of hiring a part-time driver for that period.

The chassis for a new bookmobile is due to arrive in Victoria in mid-June. The body will be built at Yarrows Ltd. Miller said he hoped the new unit would be in operation by Sept. 1.

Times' editor Brian Tobin told the board that Victoria and Saanich may forego having a centennial branch library each in favor of sharing a larger unit.

He said consideration is being given to building a library in the Town and Country area. A draft agreement is being drawn up and will be given to the two councils within a few days.

BRANCHES

Originally, the centennial program called for building branch libraries in Oak Bay, Victoria and Saanich.

Oak Bay will receive $85,000 as its share of the centennial grant. Total cost of the Oak Bay library will be $119,243. The difference will be paid by the municipality with the assistance of such groups as the Oak Bay Kiwanis.

Land for the library and adjoining senior citizens centre was purchased by the municipality.

Airport Change Could Solve Noise Problem

Installation of an alternative landing system at the western approach to Victoria International Airport could be the answer to the aircraft noise problem over Sidney and North Saanich.

But department of transport officials say the necessary $700,000 expense will not be spent unless the public make their feelings strongly felt at the federal government level.

At a public discussion forum sponsored by the Saanich Liberal Association Tuesday in Sidney, D.O.T. officials said they were concerned about the problem of jet aircraft making loud practice approaches to the airport.

But, emphasized Bob Redding of the Air Services Branch, "we are in the aviation business."

Robin Heiliger, regional superintendent of airways, said that as a result of the April 13 protest meeting in Sidney steps have been taken to adjust the instrument glide path at a steeper angle.

In additions, Canadian Pacific Airlines have been asked to practice at more reasonable hours." We have not made threats but we might impose a curfew," Heiliger said.

The crowd attending Tuesday meeting were less noisy probably because the intensive training period for pilots of Boeing 727 jet passenger planes ended in April.

Crash Victims Recovering

Mrs. James Bigsby is in good condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital with cuts and knee injury and 18-year-old Margot Taylor, 1812 West 36th, Vancouver, is also at the Jubilee in good condition with cuts.

The Bigsby's and Miss Taylor were all in one car travelling north on the highway when the accident occurred about 8:35 a.m. Tuesday near Island View Road.

The lone occupant of the other vehicle involved, Thomas A. Quinnett, 2370 Brethour, Sidney, is in satisfactory condition at Resthaven Hospital in Sidney. He suffered a broken arm.

COLQUITZ STUDENT TOPS

A grade 10 student at Colquitz junior secondary has topped Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands in the annual high school mathematics contest sponsored by the University of Waterloo.

Oak Bay senior secondary made the all-Canada team honor roll, placing 32nd out of the top 40 teams with a score of 234.25 out of a possible 420.

WRIT CHARGES DISCRIMINATION

A writ has been filed in B.C. Supreme Court in Vancouver charging Premier Bennett, Education Minister Donald Brothers and all school boards with discrimination against independent schools.

The writ is signed by four Vancouver parents and their children who are seeking reimbursement for tuition fees which they have paid during the last several years.

They also seek equal status for private school teachers with colleagues in public schools.

The group is calling itself the B.C. Association of Parents for Independent Schools Rights. It has no connection with the Federation of Independent Schools Association which issued a statement last week to that effect.

Comedian Dies at 55

TORONTO (CP)—Comedian Doug Romaine, 55, a veteran of more than 35 years in show business, died Tuesday in his home after a heart attack.

Seniors Show Festive Mood

Age has been no barrier to the festive spirit of Victorian Days celebrations.

Some 300 to 400 people over 65 participated in Silver Threads Day, Tuesday, sponsored by the Rotary Club at the Senior Citizens' Centre, Centennial Square.

Checkers, chess, cribbage and 500 were played with gift certificates awarded to winners. Sandwiches, cakes and tea were served.

Before the Judge

Alphonse Fisher, 53, of 234 Gorge Road West was fined $350 and given a partial driving ban for impaired driving.

HOME GARDEN

Time to Dry Sage and Thyme

By HILDA BEASTALL

May is early to be able to start drying sage and thyme leaves but since these plants are already flowering, a first picking can be made. This is just one more instance of our hardy garden plants being far ahead in growth and bloom this year. We have only to check flowering dates of the shrubs and perennials against those of previous years to discover a two to three-week gap.

Hilda

The lack of dull showery days is doubtless the reason behind it for although temperatures have not been high, light intensity has been strong due to absence of persistent colluds.

Sage and thyme leaves are dried in summer to use in winter, a reasonable enough procedure in most of Canada. Thyme however keeps its spicy little dark green foliage all winter here. Many of you will want to use it fresh all year.

The thing to do now is to lightly shear the kitchen thyme plants while they are blooming.

Even one plant, or perhaps I should say particularly if you have only one small thyme plant, take sharp scissors or secateurs to remove the fragrant flower stems.

By doing this, the plant will increase itself tenfold during summer, so that by fall you will have a fine bushy little green shrub instead of a single spindly stem.

Sage is not so hardy to our winter wet weather as thyme. The hairy grey leaves soak up moisture, often rotting away completely before spring. On a balcony or patio where a tub may be moved out of reach of the heaviest rains, sage will survive.

As a last resort, spread the stems in one loose layer on metal trays and place in a 200 deg. oven with the door open. Turn the pieces frequently, and dry until crisp.

If many flowers are open on either sage or thyme, remove them before picking. Closed buds are full of the essential armoactic oils and should be left on the gathered stems for flavor and aroma.

Thyme is quickly dried in two days, hung in bunches in a dry place. Paper bags with a row of small holes cut, will keep your herbs clean if hung to dry where dust circulates.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, our South declarer deliberately threw a trump trick out of the window — and both he and his partner became richer as a result. Had he not made his "wastrel" play, the slam contract would have been defeated. The hand occurred in a rubber-bridge game. Neither side vulnerable. East deals.

Opening lead: Two of ♣.

After South had won the opening club lead with his ace, he took a time-out for inventory. He perceived that he was a tremendous favorite to avoid the loss of a trump trick by cashing the ace and king of trumps. With but three trumps outstanding, the queen would be caught about 78 per cent of the time.

But even if he avoided the loss of a trump trick, he still figured to be defeated: unless the six adversely-held hearts were divided 3-3 in the hands of the opponents (a 36 per cent chance), he would lose three heart tricks. Of course, if he were lucky, and the six missing hearts were divided 3-3, then after giving away two heart tricks, South's fourth heart would become a winner.

At trick two, he led the deuce of spades toward's the board's doubleton 9-7. West took his queen—and dummy's nine-spot had just become an entry to the board. West returned a heart, South taking East's queen with his ace. A trump was now led to dummy's nine, picking up West's last trump en route. On the ace and king of diamonds, South discarded two hearts. At the end, he conceded a heart trick to the defenders. His only losers were a trump trick and a heart.

As South played the hand, he was certain of getting to dummy regardless of which of the defenders possessed the trump queen. If it were East (hypothetically), then dummy's seven-spot would be taken by East's queen, leaving the nine as an entry to dummy.

It is apparent that if declarer had cased the ace and king of trumps, he would have felled West's queen, thus avoiding the loss of a trump trick. But had he done this, he would have been unable to reach dummy to cash the king and ace of diamonds. He would then have lost three heart tricks.

VICAR TURNS JOB OVER TO HORSES

LANGLEY, England (UPI) — Rev. Brian Walshe said an anonymous donor sent him $12 with a note saying: "Make it work."

Walshe said he divided the money up into 10 24 cent money orders and sent them to 50 horse racing bookies with instructions to send him any winnings.

The vicar said he had a $24,000 goal to pay for an extension to his parish youth centre.

Move Deplored

EDMONTON (CP) — CP Rail's move to restrict free rail passes of pensioners is deplorable "after these employees have given most of their lives in service of the railway," Jack Pickett, president of the Edmonton council of Railway Unions, said Tuesday. A spokesman for the railway said economic reasons forced the restrictions.

★ ★ ★

Not Enough Done

HOBBEMA, Alta. (CP) — The federal government has done a lot but not enough on housing problems in Canada, Robert Andras, federal minister responsible for housing, said Tuesday.

Andras, here for the annual meeting of the Indian Association of Alberta, said Ottawa will assist housing co-operatives in any way it can.

Visit Vetoed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Most Rev. Maxim Hermaniuk, Archbishop — Metropolitan of Winnipeg for Ukranians in Canada, said Tuesday he was surprised and disturbed that Pope Paul has vetoed a scheduled visit to Canada by Cardinal Joseph Slipyj, regarded by Ukranians as patriarch of their church.

★ ★ ★

Paper Criticized

CALGARY (CP) — The federal government's white paper on unemployment insurance faced a heavy barrage of criticism from Alberta and Northwest Territories Jaycees at a regional convention here. Delegates passed a resolution suggesting that "special treatment should not be afforded to the unemployed of any specific region or regions of the country."

★ ★ ★

Eyesight Poor

SASKATOON (CP) — Research teams from the University of Waterloo school of optometry have found twice as many visual defects among Indian children as among white youngsters, William M. Lyle, professor of the school said Tuesday.

Dr. Lyle said in an interview that fourth and fifth year optometry students working during the summer months among Indians and Eskimos in Canada and Negro groups on the Turk Islands north of Haiti found nearly double the amount of astigmatism and other visual problems.

Festival Out

ST. BONIFACE, Man. (CP) — St. Boniface city council voted unanimously Tuesday night to prohibit the staging of a day-long festival in downtown Provencher Park this summer.

City council voted against the festival after receiving reports from the police department and city parks board. Council also agreed with a city finance committee recommendation that it refuse to donate a $1,500 grant requested by festival organizers.

Hydrants Change

Fire Chief Fred Grossman said the new colors will be easier to see at night and the different-colored caps will indicate the flow strength of the main to which a hydrant is connected.

No Interest

REGINA (CP) — The Social Credit Party of Saskatchewan has no interest in the June 23 provincial election and will not run any candidates, party leader Joe Thauberger said Tuesday night. Thauberger took over the leadership of the party earlier this year after it split into factions following attempts to merge with the Saskatchewan Progressive Conservative Party.

★ ★ ★

Bylaw Passed

CALGARY (CP) — City council Tuesday approved a bylaw requiring wheelchair ramps, wider halls and special washroom facilities for such new buildings as theatres, auditoriums, museums, courtrooms, hospitals, police stations, banks, offices, department stores and some smaller markets.

11 Arrested

REGINA (CP) — City police arrested 11 persons following a disturbance Monday that started at a band festival in a south-central Regina park. Most of the charges involve wilful damage and creating a disturbance.

Playwright, Actor Dies

LONDON (AP) — Terence de Marney, actor, director and playwright, died Tuesday when he fell under a subway train in London's West End. He was 62.

De Marney played leading roles, particularly in thrillers, for more than 30 years. In 1953, he alternated with his brother Derick de Marney in the lead role of Dangerous Curves, which they jointly produced and directed at the Garrick Theatre.

He was the author of several plays. Among the best known were Wanted for Murder and The Crime of Margaret Foley, both written in collaboration with Percy Robinson.

B.C. News Briefs

Conspiracy Admitted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Marilyn Fleck, 22, of Burnaby was fined $400 Tuesday and placed on probation for two years, after pleading guilty in provincial court to conspiracy in an alleged marriage-for-convenience scheme.

She was charged with 16 other persons in an attempt to obtain landed immigrant status for six East Indian men.

Others charged include the Abbotsford marriage commissioner, Anton K. Pauls, and six female impersonators.

$8,000 Raised

VANCOUVER (CP) — University of B.C. undergraduate engineers have presented an $8,000 cheque to the Easter Seal Fund for handicapped children. The money was raised by encouraging students, who receive a five-per-cent rebate in April on books bought during the winter session, to leave their sales slips in a box in the university bookstore.

★ ★ ★

Construction Blocked

COQUITLAM (CP) — About 20 residents stood by in Glen Park Tuesday to prevent a municipal works crew from starting construction on a planned gravel truck diversion through the park. Mayor Jack Ballard has said construction of the $20,000 road diversion would probably start this week, but residents in the area say they will block the nebessary removal of about 200 trees.

Prairie Premiers Want Results or Else; Bourassa Stalling to Gain Powers in Social Field

By DON MacPHERSON

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government is getting ready for a struggle of wills with its partners in Confederation at next month's constitutional conference, says a qualified government source.

The source, who did not want to be identified, said in an interview Tuesday the constitutional conference in Victoria June 14-16 will be "the most important ever" and could conceivably be the last.

He said Quebec's demands in the field of social policies are pitted against the impatience of Ottawa and the other provinces with Quebec's refusal to accept a proposal for repatriating and amending the constitution.

He said the three Prairie premiers—Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan, Harry Strom of Alberta and Ed Schreyer of Manitoba—have indicated individually that they will not attend any future constitutional conferences if no agreement is reached at the Victoria conference on the amending formula.

He said the three gave the indications at the last conference in February and that he believes that they still hold the same opinions.

WOULD DISAPPOINT HIM

In Winnipeg Tuesday night, Premier Schreyer of Manitoba said it would be "safe to say I would be very disappointed "if the conference rejected the amending formula; but he ventured no opinion on what effect a rejection would have on future conferences.

Premier Strom of Alberta said last week there must be agreement at this conference on some points or there would be no purpose in continuing discussions.

Premier Thatcher, who has called a provincial election in Saskatchewan for June 23, was en route to a political meeting in Watrous, Sask., and unavailable for comment.

ONLY BY BRITISH

The Quebec government source said the provinces other than Quebec, especially the Prairie provinces really want only a formula which "brings home" the Canadian constitution after more than 103 years of Confederation.

The British North America Act of 1867, which created Confederation and forms the basis of the Canadian constitution, is a British law which can only be amended at present by the British parliament upon an address from Canada.

In addition to a new amending formula, the source said, Ottawa wants to have guarantees of the language rights of cultural minorities in each of the provinces entrenched in the constitution.

The source said Quebec is alone in wanting substantial changes in the distribution of constitutional powers between the federal and provincial governments.

He said that for Quebec to accept the repatriation and amending formula without first having received guarantees that it would get the constitutional powers it wants would effectively end the negotiations.

Once the other governments had got what they wanted, they would lose interest in substantial constitutional revision, and Quebec would be left alone pushing for negotiations.

THINKS WILL TAKE IT

Quebec was holding out its agreement to the formula worked out at the last constitutional conference, held Feb. 8-9 in Ottawa, in an attempt to get prior agreement on a new distribution of powers in the field of social policies, he said.

The source said Quebec would probably accept the formula if it got much of what it wants first because it does not expect that a much better formula could be worked out.

He said Premier Robert Bourassa's announced intention to have the formula studied by legal experts to determine its implications for Quebec was a tactical move to enable him to avoid giving his immediate approval.

The implications of the formula were self-evident and needed no study.

He said that, if Quebec does not get enough of the powers it wants, it could reject the formula on the grounds that the three Opposition parties in the Quebec national assembly have termed it unacceptable.

Mr. Bourassa himself has been cautious and non-committal in expressing his opinion of the formula and has promised the Opposition that if the formula were accepted at the conference it would be submitted to the national assembly for ratification.

However, he said, Quebec recognizes that the other governments are impatient with the meagre results of the long series of constitutional conferences and are anxious to bring back a concrete achievement from Victoria.

Manitoba NDP Easily Wins Votes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Manitoba NDP government survived two non-confidence votes Tuesday night as the legislature approved its $517.1 million budget.

The government won both votes by 28 to 22, getting support only from NDP members. Against it were 17 Conservatives, three Liberals, one Social Crediter and one independent. Six members were absent.

Elsewhere in Canada, the Ontario legislature discussed health estimates and Quebec's national assembly included transport and pollution discussions.

The Conservative motion was a general condemnation of economic policies and the growth of government spending. The budget forecasts a slight surplus in current account for the 1971-72 fiscal year.

In Toronto, health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence gave figures showing how much the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan costs and how much it will take in from premiums and federal grants.

The total revenue is expected to be $541,250 million, made up of $317.3 million in premiums, $205.45 million from federal grants and another $18.5 million from overdue federal contributions. The total expenditures for OHSIP for 1971-72 are expected to be $580.448 million.

The Quebec government will initiate a new anti-pollution program this summer to begin with examination of 34 lakes used for recreation purposes, Victor Goldbloom, minister responsible for the environment, told the Quebec house.

He said that following the study, guidelines will be laid down governing government waste disposal of municipalities and industries that are at fault.

Against PM's Tour

TORONTO (CP) — Members of the Jewish Defence League projected slides on the side of a Russian freighter berthed here Tuesday night, protesting alleged anti-Jewish policies in the Soviet Union. They also said they will protest Prime Minister Trudeau's current tour of the Soviet Union when he returns.

About two dozen members of the militant organization took part in the waterfront demonstration, showing pictures of concentration camps and recent trials of Jews in the Soviet Union on the side of the freighter Donetskiy Shakintyer. Some members of the ship's crew watched for a time from the decks.

Hyman Engel, Canadian coordinator of the league and organizer of the protest, said in an interview the league plans to protest Mr. trudeau's "friendliness" with the Russians when he returns from the tour.

Mr. Engel said the Russians are guilty of "cultural genocide" because Jews in the Soviet Union can not publish their own books in Hebrew or establish their own theatres.

Man Sentenced

VANCOUVER (CP) — David McCarthy, 28, was sentenced Tuesday to six months for selling a bag of marijuana to an undercover city police officer may 11. He was the first person sentenced on charges arising out of a recent roundup of 33 alleged drug traffickers following four months undercover work by city police and RCMP.

Creation of Universe May Have Foretold Its Ultimate End

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

WASHINGTON (WP) — Fresh evidence was presented last week that the universe in which we live will someday be blown apart the same way as it was created 10 billion years ago — in a colossal fireball.

This evidence lends strong support to the theories of those astronomers who believe we live in a closed universe, one in which a space traveller leaving earth at the speed of light would eventually return to his starting point.

The new evidence disputes the theory that we live in an open universe where the same space traveller would never return, a theory almost as widely held in astronomical circles as the one of the closed universe.

The way the closed universe theory goes, a team of astronomers from the Naval Research Laboratory and the Johns Hopkins University wrote in this week's Nature Magazine, the expanding universe will slow down its expansion and then reverse itself until the cosmos compresses itself into a new fireball.

If the closed universe theory is correct, the NRL and Johns Hopkins team goes on, the universe will reach its point of maximum expansion in about 70 billion years. When it does, the 14 million galaxies that made up the universe will collapse into the same configuration they were in at the time of creation.

"We're about 10 billion years into the expansion phase right now," said Dr. Herbert Friedman of the NRL. "At least that's what we estimate from our knowledge of the oldest stars we can see with telescopes."

The new evidence for all this comes from a pair of rocket flights, in which X-ray telescopes aboard the rockets were pointed at two distant clusters of galaxies known as Coma and Virgo.

Astronomers figure that all the stars and all the galaxies total only 3 per cent of the mass needed to provide the gravitational force to collapse the universe. The missing 97 per cent must be gas filling the spaces between the galaxies, which is what the two rockets looked for in their observations of Coma and Virgo.

"The observations revealed X-ray fluxes 20 times as great as would be expected from the individual galaxies," the NRL and Johns Hopkins group said, "suggesting that this excess is produced by hot gas within the clusters.

Dr. Freidman said that the gas mass inside each cluster appeared no greater than gas floating in intergalactic space, but that its temperature was far higher. Intergalactic gas is heated by cosmic rays to temperatures of about one million degrees, whereas the gas within the Coma and Virgo clusters was at least eight times hotter.

"The heat of these gases between the galaxies suggests these galaxies are disintegrating," Dr. Friedman said. "What we're seeing are a whole lot of little bangs following the big bang that created the universe."

Dr. Friedman said he believes that all galaxies (including our own Milky Way) are being torn apart by nuclear explosions, and it is this disintegration that supplies the missing mass for the closed universe.

"It's all we need to collapse the universe," he said. "That and the 3 per cent of mass we have in the stars and in our galaxies."

LONDON (Reuter) — Nine police were injured outside a youth club in London's Notting Hill area as they tried to separate gangs of fighting teen-agers. One officer was hit on the head with a hammer and two were slashed with broken bottles.

Bomb Hoax Nets $550,000

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter)—Police scoured Sydney and its environs for a man who hoaxed Qantas Airlines into giving him $550,000 today after he said a bomb was secreted aboard one of its airliners, in flight with 128 persons aboard.

After he received the money, the man telephoned to say there really was no bomb aboard the Boeing 707, carrying 116 passengers and 12 crew, which was circling over Botany Bay to burn up fuel.

A Qantas spokesman said the man's claim that a bomb was aboard had to be taken seriously.

"There were 128 people's lives at stake—we had to pay the money," he said.

A Qantas spokesman said the drama began at 11 a.m. today when the department of civil aviation received a telephone call saying a bomb was in a locker at the international terminal at Sydney Airport.

The locker was opened and a bomb was found.

It was of gelignite, with a barometrically-controlled trigger system designed to explode at a pre-set altitude.

With the device were three notes—one addressed to Capt. R. J. Ritchie, the general manager of Qantas, and another to a member of the police.

The third gave technical explanations of how the bomb worked and how it could be defused.

The Qantas spokesman said the note to Ritchie claimed a similar device was on board Qantas Flight 755, and demanded $550,000 for information on how it could be found and defused.

The aircraft was then on its way to Hong Kong.

The airliner was recalled to Sydney and circled over Botany Bay, burning up fuel in preparation for a possible emergency landing.

Shortly afterward Ritchie received another telephone call from "Mr. Brown," who said there was no bomb on the aircraft.

A Party For The Fearful

By ANTHONY WESTELL
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — The Action Canada movement launched Tuesday by Paul Hellyer purports to be a democratic movement through which the average Canadian can participate in setting national goals.

But it looks more like an organization designed to mount Hellyer on a white horse and send him back to power in Ottawa at the head of an army of the discouraged and the frightened.

'Those Little People'

The full-page recruiting advertisement which Action Canada is to run across the country next Saturday is addressed to "those little people whose future is being manipulated or sacrificed for the benefit of entrenched bureaucratic 'overseers'."

It warns against big government and "unchecked power over your life by giant corporate interests and super union czars." It declares that Parliament has become "a whimpering rubber stamp."

The ad goes on, "Let's do something about it" and promises that Action Canada will bring the little people back into the mainstream.

That was Hellyer's theme at his press conference Tuesday. He wants to listen to the people, to speak for their interests, and he's so flexible and informal that he has not even decided how the new movement will be structured.

But in fact, he has already made his own soundings to discover what issues are bugging Canadians deep-down.

Fundamental Malaise

He disclosed that several months ago he commissioned a private survey which discovered a "fundamental malaise" among Canadians. It is broad and hard to define, said Hellyer, but the poll showed Canadians turning inwards, fed up with high taxes, unemployment, red tape, inability to communicate, the failure to achieve national standards of excellence.

Action Canada's answers to the malaise are, oddly enough, the ideas Hellyer has been advocating for years, as a Liberal MP and cabinet minister and amateur student of economics. He and his movement are for tax cuts, wage and price controls, better housing, urban transportation systems, more Canadian savings to promote greater Canadian ownership of Canadian resources.

These are not so much programs as slogans directed to troubled people looking for simple answers to complicated problems.

Magician's Promise

The magician's promise is carried even further in the coupon in the advertisement which invites new members of Action Canada: "Select the problems you feel should be solved in Canada right now. Rate up to give in order of importance — ● Tax reform, ● Pollution ● Federal-provincial relations ● Unemployment ● Welfare reforms ● Inflation and the economy ● National economic independence ● Constitutional revision ● Multi-cultural problems ● Crime ● Canada's foreign relations."

Just tick the problems you want settled right away and indicate those that can wait until next week, and mail in your membership to Paul Hellyer, founding chairman, and the founding committee.

Just who is on the committee, heading the new mass movement? Hellyer says that "we" — he is coy about indentifying the other members of the in-group selected the committee to be presentative of average Canadians. They turn out, when they speak at the press conference or are interviewed later, to be a mixture of people with a variety of motives, ranging from the slightly kooky to simple devotion to Hellyer, their friend and leader.

Out of a Rut

Henri Laurier Q.C., a Montreal lawyer with gold-rimmed spectacles and a turned down mouth, illustrates his general frustration with the federal bureaucracy by complaining that parking paces on Parliament Hill are always reserved for civil servants. He hopes Action Canada will get the country out of a rut. Because there is no difference between the regular parites.

Soldier 'Shields' 3 From Bomb Blast

BELFAST (CP) — A British army sergeant who took the full force of a suitcase bomb after herding a father and two young children to safety died today.

The bomb wounded 27 other persons, destroyed a large part of an army-police barracks in Belfast and blew five cars across the street.

Police said the suitcase was apparently thrown by a teen-ager.

The sergeant was the eighth British soldier killed in Northern Ireland by terrorists and the second in five days.

The death toll since Northern Ireland erupted into violence in August, 1969, now stands at 55.

POLICE MAY SHOOT

Under the pressure of escalating violence in the strife-torn North, Premier Brian Faulkner a few hours earlier announced that the army had been authorized to shoot anyone carrying weapons or acting suspiciously without waiting for orders.

Opposition politicians threatened today to walk out of the Northern Ireland Parliament to protest the warning.

Two MPs said today they might quit Parliament over the statement.

But the British Army said it will only shoot to kill when there is good reason and intention rather than risk endangering innocent persons with warning shots. Troops in riot situations have fired only after loudspeaker warnings.

The suitcase bomb contained at least 30 pounds of gelignite. A terrorist hurled it through a doorway of the barracks in Springfield Road, on the edge of a district that is a stronghold of the Irish Republican Army.

THATCHER CALLS VOTE ON LABOR COURT ISSUE

Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan has announced a provincial general election for Wednesday, June 23, in which his Liberal party will be seeking a third term of office. See Page 3.

Thatcher said Tuesday the major issue will be a better method of resolving labor-management disputes and promised if his party is returned he will implement a labor-management court.

Contractor Charged In Machete Murders

YUBA CITY, Calif. (AP) — The bodies of nine transient fruit workers, hacked with a machete or some kind of heavy knife, have been unearthed from the peach and plum orchards of this farming community, the county sheriff announced today.

"He will be booked for nine counts of murder," the sheriff said of Corona. Whiteaker did not announce an alleged motive for the slayings.

Undersheriff Frank Cartoscelli said all the victims were transient fruit workers, ranging in age from 40 to 60 and that the times of the killings ranged from five or six weeks ago to sometime this week.

Corona was led into the county jail with his head covered by sweater and coat, his hands manacled behind his back. He was under heavy guard.

The bodies were found—eight Tuesday and one last Friday in two local fruit orchards. All were in shallow graves.

Cartoscelli said the murder weapon was a machete or heavy knife.

NEWS BRIEFS

Passengers Stricken

TORONTO (CP) — Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. has advised customers of price increases of up to an average of 4.8 per cent. The 4.8-per-cent increase is for hot-rolled and cold-rolled sheet and strip steel and is effective July 1. A major portion of these products are used in the manufacture of consumer items.

WARM WELCOME FOR TRUDEAUS

Times News Services

MURMANSK—Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and his wife Margaret were welcomed here Tuesday night by enthusiastic crowds.

The Canadian visitors leave tonight for Leningrad for the final stop of their Russian tour before returning to Ottawa Friday.

Earlier, Trudeau made a plea for international co-operation in preserving the human heritage and environment of the global "city of man," stressing the need for Soviet-Canadian co-operation.

Trudeau also was shown through the world's most powerful icebreaker, the Lenin. See story on Page 3.

Kansas—Not Amchitka Urge B.C. Groups

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two British Columbia environmental groups urged the Atomic Energy Commission Tuesday to shift the proposed underground nuclear test set for Amchitka Island in the Aleutians for this fall to the geographic centre of the United States rather than threaten Canada, Russia and Japan.

In briefs to be presented today in Juneau, Alaska, the B.C. Environmental Council said the planned five-megaton blast "presents an undoubted threat to the Pacific fisheries, in particular those of Canada, Japan and the Soviet."

The Sierra Club of B.C. calls the test "ecological vandalism" and says giving the AEC the authority to conduct hearings on its own is "somewhat analagous to the fox being given the job to watch over the chickens."

The council, whose brief is to be presented by Patrick A. Moore, a graduate student at the University of B.C. Resource Science Centre, points out that Amchitka is only about 800 miles from the Russian mainland, 1,500 miles from Japan and about the same distance from Canada.

It said because the U.S. has the power to explode or not explode the nuclear device, it should be willing to accept any risk associated with it and should explode it in central Kansas, its own geographic centre.

QUEBEC WANTS 1980 GAMES

QUEBEC (CP) — Finance Minister Raymond Garneau said Tuesday the Quebec government has decided to propose Quebec City as the site of the 1980 Winter Olympics.

He told the Quebec regional Chambre de Commerce a technical dossier is being prepared.

In asking for the support of neighboring municipalities, Garneau said the region has many advantages including skiing facilities at nearby Mont Ste. Anne and the annual Quebec Winter Carnival.

SURREY TELLS WELFARE RECIPIENTS:

Pick Berries—Not Cheques

SURREY (CP)—More than 300 able-bodied welfare recipients in Surrey will be advised to pick berries rather than pick up welfare cheques after June 1.

Municipal council Tuesday night authorized the district welfare department to send out letters to employable welfare recipients suggesting that the social assistance cheques they receive next week should be their last for the time being because work is available picking berries.

Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said in an interview that if employable persons refuse to accept available work they are not entitled to welfare.

"If work is available, even though it is not the type of work they like, they should be made to accept it or be refused welfare," he said.

Council was told there are 349 persons on welfare who are capable of work such as berry picking.

In Edmonton Tuesday night city council considered and later rejected a proposal to make transient youth pay their way by cleaning parks, ravines and public areas.

Mayor Ivor Dent opposed the motion, telling council that such a system would create an administrative nightmare in dealings with unions alone.

BULLETIN

—The Press Trust of India News Agency reported tonight that at least 120 Pakistani troops had been killed by Indian border security forces in encounters in the last 48 hours.

The agency said the Pakistanis had intruded from East Pakistan into the Indian state of Assam and the territory of Meghalaya.

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Gandhi appealed today for international intervention in East Pakistan to avoid a threat to peace in Southeast Asia.

"The international community must appreciate the very critical character of the situation that has now developed," she told Parliament.

"Any failure to do so may well lead to disastrous consequences."

The prime minister in her second major appeal to the world community in three days, said the civil strife in East Pakistan had touched off "calculated genocide resulting in the murder of tens of thousands of men, women and children" and a vast refugee influx into India.

"It is a problem that threatens the peace and security of India and indeed of Southeast Asia," she said.

"The world must intervene to see that peace and security is restablished and maintained."

Mrs. Gandhi did not spell out what type of international intervention she wanted, but she made clear that India opposed any resumption of economic aid to Pakistan that will be used against the people of Bangla Desh (Bengali nation.)

THE FOSTER PLAN

Wanted: A Chance For a Sad Child

Gerald, 12 years of age, is fair and slight with terrific appetite. His temporary foster parents have made him feel he is wanted and worthwhile. He is trying hard to make up for all he has missed in his earlier years. Is there a family in Greater Victoria who would like to make this lad a permant part of their family?

Charlie is 14 and lives up-Island. Thanks to heart surgery he can now begin to lead a normal life, but needs the physiotherapy of the George Pearkes Clinic. A foster family who lives within busing distance of the clinic is needed.

Andrea is almost six years of age, of Indian background and appearance. Raised as an only child, she does not know how to play with children her own age. Needs foster parents who can help her get over the death of the person who raised her.

★ ★ ★

The trail that I've blazed across the jungle of the newsroom to my desk happens to pass the swamp of the city editor and as I went that way, having just come from a two-hour briefing at the Family and Children's Service, I heard a familiar lament.

"It's a lousy news day," the city editor was dourly informing the news editor. "Just nothing seems to be happening out there."

Regrettably, we come to think that way in this business, to assume that news is made only by happenings rather than the day-in-day-out life of the city. On that particular day, for example, we'd have been fully justified in going to press with an eight-column banner line: Epic Drama Here in 327 Homes.

Even a cursory investigation into the workings of the foster parent plan under that agency is an overwhelming experience for someone unfamiliar with it. In those 327 homes from Sidney to Sooke there's truly a continuing, real-life drama of selflessness, dedication, enormous patience, joy and love that makes the unlikeliest soap opera seem as insipid as Br'er Rabbit.

Some 425 boys and girls of all ages, some from broken homes, some by way of the juvenile courts, all with a background of trouble, have been taken into, for the most part, ordinary, middle-class families and given the chance for a purposeful, worthwhile life. Some have not made it, but an incredible number needed only that chance.

From the moment you begin to look into this story you marvel at the kind of people who will volunteer.

More often than not they'll be taking a child who is troubled, difficult, unhappy and insecure. Many of the teen-agers will carry the stigma of delinquent. There's no money to be made from it. Indeed, many foster parents are lucky to break even on a grant that, depending on the age of the child, varies from $50 to $75 a month for room and board and from $8 to $14 for clothing. If the relationship is an entire success, if the foster child becomes an intregal, accepted and loved part of the family, the end result may be the wrench when he returns to his natural parents.

These predictable headaches and heartaches have not daunted the heroic 327 families — and, talking to some of them, you find they look on their role more as a privilege than a duty — but they help to explain why a chronic shortage of volunteers has now become something of a crisis.

The whole foster parent philosophy has evolved over the last decade from the brief care of a child whose parents were sick or in distress to the present concept of a more permanent relationship. A child who has not returned to his natural parents in a year or 18 months is very likely to remain in his foster home until he goes out to make his own way in the world.

This more demanding function by the foster parent has been complicated in the last couple of years by a sharp increase in the number of young people needing substitute homes. Under the amendment to the Protection of Children Act the juvenile court may commit young people as wards of the Family and Children's Service. This means not merely an increase in numbers, but an increase in the kind of youngsters, branded as delinquents, who are always hardest to place.

There's been a corresponding increase, too, in the numbers of Indian children who need homes. It's a sobering, saddening thing to learn that in the past year 13 per cent of all children in need of foster homes were Indian, though the Indian population comprises about half of one per cent in the area under the agency's jurisdiction.

While there's a surplus of homes for infants, either as foster parents or for adoption, there are never enough families willing to take boys or girls over the age of 10, especially those with a court history.

Mrs. B. Levitz Packford, who has been active in this work as supervisor for the past 12 years and has not yet lost her sense of wonder at the seiflessness of the foster parents, tells me that 35 homes are needed right now to have an adequate selection in matching children to a family environment that will be best for them.

She is the first to admit that it is a demanding, time-consuming job requiring endless patience and understanding. That it also offers deep rewards of satisfaction and accomplishment will be seen in a second report.

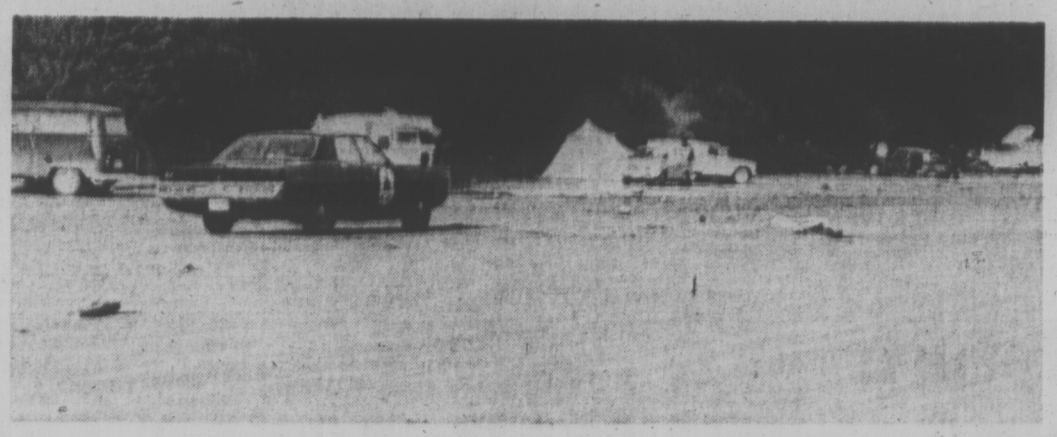
Ask the Times

Q. Would you please tell me why fish jump? C.L.

A. The Times' resident sport fishing expert Arthur Mayse suggests there are probably varied reasons for fish jumping, but nobody seems to know for sure. One theory, he says, is that fish, especially salmon, jump to dislodge tiny parasites called "sea lice" which live on their scales. Or they may jump for sheer fun. Another theory is that they may leap during a spawning run to loosen the strings of roe they will soon lay in some streambed. And, of course, fish jump to shake loose hooks and to get over barriers or away from predators.

Q. Whom should I contact to become a member of Golden Age?—D.L.H.

A. We're not sure what you mean, but Silver Threads Service, 4 Centennial Sq., Tel. 388-4268, should be able to help.



Police drive by but do not charge Chesterman's Beach campers who ignored this sign

Beach Camping Ban Surprises Tofino Mayor

Hugo Peterson, mayor of Tofino said today he opposes a government order prohibiting camping on Chesterman's Beach, situated north of the Long Beach Pacific Rim National Park.

Signs banning squatting and any type of camping on all beaches situated on either side of the national park were posted at all accesses to the waterfront following passage last week of a provincial-government order-in council.

But most people seemed to have ignored the order over the Victoria Day weekend. There were at least 60 campsites at Chesterman's and many others at other beaches situated outside the park.

●

RCMP at Tofino said the matter is being discussed at higher levels.

It is estimated between 6,000 and 8,000 people visited Long Beach over the weekend.

Peterson said the government order was premature.

"It should not have been passed at this time — not until this area is organized to cope with and to service large crowds," he said. "We are not yet ready."

Peterson sad residents are not opposed to legislation banning squatting.

"This was the original proposal," he said. "Then overnight we learned that weekend camping has also been prohibited."

He said he didn't know who was responsible for getting the government to pass the non-camping order.

●

Ernie Bach, a former president of the Tofino Chamber of Commerce, said last week, that Dr. H. R. McDairmid, MLA for Alberni, attempted to persuade the regional district to pass a bylaw banning camping on beaches but the request was turned down.

McDairmid is the owner of property overlooking Chesterman's Beach, a favorite camping spot and recreational area for Tofino residents.

At the present, plans call for a housing subdivision.

"I think a part of upland property should be commercial," he said. "This would include a camping site and services."

The Pacific Rim park is 16 miles long and this year provides campers with about four miles of beach frontage. Plans call for expansion of camping sites on property overlooking the beach.

To the north and south of the park there are also scores of beaches, one of the most popular being Chesterman's. Many residents would like this area incorporated into the park.

Bigger Drug Squad Wanted 'Before We Get Swamped'

By
CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Commission chairman Mayor Courtney Haddock said the city should try now to get an improved drug-fighting operation "before we get swamped."

The commission decided it would write to federal authorities and ask for an increased RCMP force in the Victoria area.

Haddock said there have been reports of increasing drug traffic that are "not very comforting."

Gregory said he shared Haddock's concern. There were "half a dozen" known hard drug addicts in Victoria five years ago, and today there are "at least 50," Gregory said.

Besides the RCMP drug squad, Victoria contributes one full-time policeman to the work, as do two other of the local forces, Gregory said.

Gregory added that "we are not unique in having this problem — it exists in nearly every city in North America today, if not the world."

Haddock called for more preventive action, but Gregory said this work is being done. "... the young will experiment," however. He said he would "certainly recommend" that the commission write a letter to the RCMP asking for more help.

Haddock also said he wants more police work in and around the Churchill Hotel, whose beer parlor exit lies near Bastion Square.

"The people (merchants) in Bastion Square are having a difficult time," Haddock said. "They come out of that place, and the next thing you know ..."

Gregory said there is fighting around most of the city's beer parlors near closing time each night.

Haddock said "they can fight all they like" outside most beer parlors because it usually takes place in a parking lot.

"You can always do something about the licence," he suggested.

Gregory said he can report excessive trouble to the provincial liquor control board, which administers liquor selling licences.

But he said since the last major complaint about the Churchill — "since the fiasco with the 19-year-olds" last year — that hotel has improved the behavior of clientele.

Not Inside Job Say Police

Victoria police said today they do not believe that the weekend break-in at Woodward's Mayfair store was an inside job.

The break-in occurred sometime between 7 p.m. Saturday and 4 p.m. Monday. Merchandise estimated to be worth more than $30,000 was stolen.

This included about $15,000 worth of watches, $5,080 in cameras, film and binoculars and approximately $4,000 worth of perfume.

Three police investigators have been assigned to work on the case, Detective-Inspector Bill Andrews said today. Ferry and airport exit points on Vancouver Island are being checked, and Vancouver police have been notified.

This procedure is followed when the amount stolen is so large that it cannot be disposed of in the area.

The break-in was not discovered until late Monday afternoon when a store employee started work and had trouble entering the store with his key.

The thieves apparently climbed a wire fence which enclosed a display of camping equipment. From a tent next to a store window, the thieves cut out a piece of plate glass about 20 by 30 inches and entered the store.

Police reports said the thieves appeared to know the routine of the store's maintenance men who left the premises at 7 p.m. Saturday and did not return until 4 p.m. Monday. They also seemed to know the location of a portable cupboard behind a counter in which keys to shipping and receiving doors were kept.

ESCAPE ROUTE

A hasp had been knocked from the cupboard and padlocks were removed from the shipping and receiving doors. Lock mechanisms had been removed from a hardware department door and a door leading to the patio roof.

Sources said the two doors apparently had been prepared for use as escape routes. They would have been kept open during the robbery, then closed after the escape so pursuers could not follow.

The stolen goods were removed in suitcases also taken from the store. The thieves rounded up so many containers that not all were used. Some overnight bags were found left at the camera counter.

Department managers were called to the store Monday after the robbery was reported. They began the job of tabulating a list of stolen items.

Andrews said the list is not yet complete. One report said rings, brooches and other jewelry may have been taken. Drawers in the store's post office and drug departments had been jimmied with screwdrivers, but nothing was reported missing.

Indian Festival Not Centennial

Chief Cy Baker of the coast Salish said Tuesday that the Indian people had not gathered at the Tsamis Festival at Macaulay Point to celebrate the B.C. centennial.

He feels that the centennial is "nothing to celebrate as far as his people are concerned. We are celebrating the revival of interest in our cultural heritage among our children," the chief said.

"Our children are interested in our culture now and want to learn of our people and the old ways. We are happy to show our culture as a means of establishing communications between whites and Indians."

Chief Baker does not believe his people can return to the old ways completely. "We must become used to the new ways and learn to use the material things that come with it," he said.

Library Won't Air Budget

Details of the Greater Victoria Public Library's financial statements were refused reporters Tuesday by the board.

Chairman Col. A. O. Hood said "We are not trying to hide anything" but added that some details in the statements were still to be dealt with.

At its previous meeting, Hood had agreed to reporters having access to the information.

Library director Donald Miller said today the board's reluctance might be attributed to their being "sensitive to criticism from the municipalities" and that changes had been made to the budget after it had been set.

Begging Scheme Foiled

Two young men who devised what Judge William Ostler called an "ingenious" scheme to finance a summer trip were each fined $15 today when they pleaded guilty to begging door to door.

Gerald E. McDormand, 19, of 115 East Burnside, and Roy MacLaren, 25, of 181 Kuper, court was told, went from door to door on Pilot Street Tuesday evening asking occupants for a nickel.

They said homeowners that they were canvassing all residents in the city for nickels so they would have enough money to go on a trip.

Ostler told McDormand that everybody admires imagination but this technique of collecting money is against the law.

McDormand said he and friends had thought the plan up but he didn't realize it is against the law.

"You'll have to think of some other method," Ostler said.

A FEW TIMES IN A year, the sea withdraws from our home cove until rocks that no normal ebb lays bare are drying in the sun. Even though the tide tables let us know when these extreme low tides are due, they never fail to surprise us. The distance between foreshore drift-logs and water's edge seems impossibly wide. The rock points have shortened, and familiar landmarks have changed shape.

One of these low-low tides was listed for Monday. What with grass to mow and the last of our bedding plants to be set out, we'd intended to ignore it. But the knowledge of an exceptional ebb under way kept nagging at us, and it occured to us that our dog was overdue for a run.

So we downed tools, and jogged off to the cove for what we assured each other would be the merest look-see.

What we chose to forget was that a low-tide beach creates its own time zone — one in which such arbitrary human measurements as hours and minutes lose meaning.

We hunted up sticks of proper sturdiness for poking around among rocks, and ambled toward the north point with a pause to investigate a sea pool.

Its sand bottom lay exposed, and it looked to be utterly empty of life. But appearances can be deceiving. You never know what creatures may have been left trapped in such a pool to wait the return of the tide.

A school of shiners, perhaps, revealed by the flash of a golden side. Sometimes a flounder half-buried in the sand, with only twin eye-bumps to suggest the presence of a flatfish in protective camouflage. Often a cloud of baby seulpins no more than a thumbnail long.

We left him to stalk these elusive darters, which he hadn't a hope of catching, and strolled on to the weed-sheathed rocks under the point.

Those slithery stones are close-laid as scales on a fish. Bright green sea lettuce clings to them. Among them lie torn shreds of red sea-towel, rough as terry cloth, and kelp fronds ripped loose by the last blow. Some of the larger rocks are streaked with a dark-brown growth prized by Chinese beach-combers for seaweed soup.

Pry a stone loose, turn it over, and you find abundant life. Blennies which we miscall sand eels wiggle and flip. Tiny crabs scuttle with pincers at the ready.

There are tube worms and sea worms, and often the brilliant sausage-shape of a sea anenome which will spread flowerlike tentacles when the tide returns.

The tide, though, was still retreating.

We followed its edge along a widened reach of sand, under a sky that hinted of rain to come.

The gulls and the fish crows were busy. We found the remains of a rock crab larger than the little nippers under the stones, orange shell overturned and neatly hollowed, lesser claws scattered on the sand. Fresh clam shells told of other feastings.

A couple of hundred yards offshore, the cove's resident Pacific loon and a fleet of lesser divers were guzzling bait-fish.

They were effective fishermen. The ripples of a dive would flatten away. Presently the bird would reappear, bright silver gripped crosswise in its bill.

A shake and a flip to position the fingerling head-on, then the feathered appetite gulped it down.

Lancer barked from the lee of the south point. He had found big game in an eel-grass patch — a warrior crab six inches or more across its armored back, with formidable pincers waving defiance.

Dog extended a gingerly paw, only to snatch it back a split second before crab could administer punishment.

They ducled, crab steadily retreating, until Lancer was shoulder-deep. Then he too retreated from the profitless encounter.

By this time, the tide had turned, and the expected rain had begun to sift down upon sea, grey tidelands, and a pair of strayed gardeners with work neglected who had meant to spend minutes only.

Not hours, as a house clock that doesn't keep beachtime reminded us!

Make or Break Talks

Prairie Premiers Want Results or Else; Bourassa Stalling to Gain Powers in Social Field

By DON MacPHERSON

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government is getting ready for a struggle of wills with its partners in Confederation at next month's constitutional conference, says a qualified government source.

The source, who did not want to be identified, said in an interview Tuesday the constitutional conference in Victoria June 14-16 will be "the most important ever" and could conceivably be the last.

He said Quebec's demands in the field of social policies are pitted against the impatience of Ottawa and the other provinces with Quebec's refusal to accept a proposal for repatriating and amending the constitution.

He said the three Prairie premiers—Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan, Harry Strom of Alberta and Ed Schreyer of Manitoba—have indicated individually that they will not attend any future constitutional conferences if no agreement is reached at the Victoria conference on the amending formula.

He said the three gave the indications at the last conference in February and that he believes that they still hold the same opinions.

WOULD DISAPPOINT HIM

In Winnipeg Tuesday night, Premier Schreyer of Manitoba said it would be "safe to say I would be very disappointed "if the conference rejected the amending formula; but he ventured no opinion on what effect a rejection would have on future conferences.

Premier Strom of Alberta said last week there must be agreement at this conference on some points or there would be no purpose in continuing discussions.

Premier Thatcher, who has called a provincial election in Saskatchewan for June 23, was en route to a political meeting in Watrous, Sask., and unavailable for comment.

ONLY BY BRITISH

The Quebec government source said the provinces other than Quebec, especially the Prairie provinces really want only a formula which "brings home" the Canadian constitution after more than 103 years of Confederation.

The British North America Act of 1867, which created Confederation and forms the basis of the Canadian constitution, is a British law which can only be amended at present by the British parliament upon an address from Canada.

In addition to a new amending formula, the source said, Ottawa wants to have guarantees of the language rights of cultural minorities in each of the provinces entrenched in the constitution.

The source said Quebec is alone in wanting substantial changes in the distribution of constitutional powers between the federal and provincial governments.

He said that for Quebec to accept the repatriation and amending formula without first having received guarantees that it would get the constitutional powers it wants would effectively end the negotiations.

Once the other governments had got what they wanted, they would lose interest in substantial constitutional revision, and Quebec would be left alone pushing for negotiations.

THINKS WILL TAKE IT

Quebec was holding out its agreement to the formula worked out at the last constitutional conference, held Feb. 8-9 in Ottawa, in an attempt to get prior agreement on a new distribution of powers in the field of social policies, he said.

The source said Quebec would probably accept the formula if it got much of what it wants first because it does not expect that a much better formula could be worked out.

He said Premier Robert Bourassa's announced intention to have the formula studied by legal experts to determine its implications for Quebec was a tactical move to enable him to avoid giving his immediate approval.

The implications of the formula were self-evident and needed no study.

He said that, if Quebec does not get enough of the powers it wants, it could reject the formula on the grounds that the three Opposition parties in the Quebec national assembly have termed it unacceptable.

Mr. Bourassa himself has been cautious and non-committal in expressing his opinion of the formula and has promised the Opposition that if the formula were accepted at the conference it would be submitted to the national assembly for ratification.

However, he said, Quebec recognizes that the other governments are impatient with the meagre results of the long series of constitutional conferences and are anxious to bring back a concrete achievement from Victoria.

Manitoba NDP Easily Win Votes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Manitoba NDP government survived two non-confidence votes Tuesday night as the legislature approved its $517.1 million budget.

The government won both votes by 28 to 22, getting support only from NDP members. Against it were 17 Conservatives, three Liberals, one Social Crediter and one independent. Six members were absent.

Elsewhere in Canada, the Ontario legislature discussed health estimates and Quebec's national assembly included transport and pollution discussions.

In Winnipeg, one non-confidence motion, from the Liberals, accused the government of failure to find economic solutions to halt the outflow of employable youth.

The Conservative motion was a general condemnation of economic policies and the growth of government spending. The budget forecasts a slight surplus in current account for the 1971-72 fiscal year.

In Toronto, health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence gave figures showing how much the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan costs and how much it will take in from premiums and federal grants.

The total revenue is expected to be $541,250 million, made up of $317.3 million in premiums, $205.45 million from federal grants and another $18.5 million from overdue federal contributions. The total expenditures for OHSIP for 1971-72 are expected to be $580.448 million.

The Quebec government will initiate a new anti-pollution program this summer to begin with examination of 34 lakes used for recreation purposes, Victor Goldbloom, minister responsible for the environment, told the Quebec house.

He said that following the study, guidelines will be laid down governing government waste disposal of municipalities and industries that are at fault.

Against PM's Tour

TORONTO (CP) — Members of the Jewish Defence League projected slides on the side of a Russian freighter berthed here Tuesday night, protesting alleged anti-Jewish policies in the Soviet Union. They also said they will protest Prime Minister Trudeau's current tour of the Soviet Union when he returns.

About two dozen members of the militant organization took part in the waterfront demonsration, showing pictures of concentration camps and recent trials of Jews in the Soviet Union on the side of the freighter Donetskiy Shakintyer. Some members of the ship's crew watched for a time from the decks.

Hyman Engel, Canadian coordinator of the league and organizer of the protest, said in an interview the league plans to protest Mr. trudeau's "friendliness" with the Russians when he returns from the tour.

Mr. Engel said the Russians are guilty of "cultural genocide" because Jews in the Soviet Union can not publish their own books in Hebrew or establish their own theatres.

Man Sentenced

VANCOUVER (CP) — David McCarthy, 28, was sentenced Tuesday to six months for selling a bag of marijuana to an undercover city police officer may 11. He was the first person sentenced on charges arising out of a recent roundup of 33 alleged drug traffickers following four months undercover work by city police and RCMP.
